In December 2019, Forest Green Rovers FC was granted planning permission for its new Eco Park stadium development. Over the course of the 2020/21 season, the club will finalise its plans with a view to building the greenest stadium ever. The first stadium to be built entirely from wood, the Eco Park will set new standards in terms of sustainability, giving it the lowest carbon footprint possible. In addition, the area around the new stadium will benefit from the planting of more than 500 trees and 1.8km of new hedgerows, which will increase the biodiversity of the site. There will be easy access for pedestrians and cyclists coming from the nearby towns of Stroud and Stonehouse, charging facilities will be available for electric bikes and vehicles, and electric shuttle buses will run from nearby train stations.
UEFA’s football and social responsibility unit addresses key social responsibility issues through football in close partnership with member associations and expert organisations. These icons are found throughout the report, at the beginning of the relevant sections, to indicate the issue or issues being addressed by the organisation or initiative.

Introduction
More than ever, we at UEFA are aware of the great social responsibility that we carry across Europe and around the world. When the 2018/19 season ended, none of us could possibly have foreseen the magnitude of the events that awaited us in 2019/20.

Though many of our events last season were postponed, UEFA's valuable work in the area of social responsibility continued, in cooperation with national associations and specialist partners.

We continued, for example, to strive to eradicate racism and discrimination in football. Brought together by a shared passion for sport, it is imperative that the football community stands united in this fight, recognising that it is our differences – whether in terms of race, culture, religion, gender, sexual orientation or socio-economic status – that make our sport and our societies so special. In the spirit of #EqualGame, UEFA remains committed to promoting diversity and inclusion within football and society, and we will not tolerate racism or discrimination of any kind.

We have also found ourselves united against a new and unforeseen challenge: COVID-19. The effects of the pandemic have been felt around the world, and I have been impressed by the many people within football who have stepped forward to help the most vulnerable in our communities. At the same time, online meetings and remote working have given the environment a brief moment of respite from the constant strain of transport and pollution. This period has also been one of innovation, a time when people have been forced to find creative solutions, be they online exercise classes or cut-out fan photos in stadiums. I am encouraged when I see that the human spirit continues to thrive, create and show compassion even in this challenging period.

As part of our role protecting and promoting the game of football in Europe, we must ensure that future generations have the same opportunity to play that we have had. One tangible sign of UEFA's commitment to safeguarding our children's futures was the landmark decision to offset all travel-related carbon emissions associated with EURO 2020. Global warming is the biggest threat that we face today, and we very much hope that others will follow suit with climate-related actions of their own.

Now, as we see teams taking to the field of play again, and we cautiously start to welcome back supporters, we are reminded of the incomparable and passionate atmosphere that fans bring to the stadium... It is like music to my ears.

Aleksander Čeferin
UEFA president
In my first full season as chairman of the Fair Play and Social Responsibility Committee, one word that consistently came to mind was ‘resilience’.

The 2019/20 season was a unique one, with many unexpected challenges. And yet, through those challenges, I saw the unflinching nature of UEFA’s commitment to social responsibility.

Within our organisation, the human resources unit worked tirelessly to minimise the pandemic’s impact on employees, maintaining contracts and preventing as many redundancies as possible, as part of the organisation’s continued efforts to prioritise purpose over profit. While our efforts to adapt to the new reality of remote working proved to be effective, we missed seeing our colleagues. And yet, at the same time, we knew that by minimising risks and following safety protocols, we would give ourselves the chance to build back better in a more sustainable way.

As we embark on the new season, I invite you to read the various sections of this report and browse the FSR webpage on UEFA.com.

The road ahead will be challenging and will certainly require a fair amount of behavioural change. However, looking ahead to the 2020/21 season, we are hopeful that the return to play will be a success and are excited about the sustainable steps that we will take together as we continue to move forward and shape our ‘new normal’.

With health guidelines and restrictions (both internal and external) were forced to adjust their operations to comply planned activities and events were cancelled or postponed, and stakeholders however, as a result of limitations caused by the COVID-19 pandemic, many This report aims to share as much information on the season as possible; and key contributions made by UEFA competitions. Local responsibility (FSR) partners, good practices adopted by national associations and initiatives at UEFA, work carried out by external football and social responsibility activities that it undertakes or supports. This is the eighth annual UEFA Football and Social Responsibility Report and the third in the 2017/18–2020/21 business cycle. This report is divided into four main sections: • Inside UEFA • National associations • FSR portfolio partners • UEFA competitions As with previous reports in this cycle, Global Reporting Initiative (GRI) standards are cross-referenced with specific targets within the UN’s Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) in the report’s Sustainability Reporting Index section, with the aim of demonstrating UEFA’s contribution to global action on sustainable development. However, the 2019/20 report goes further than its predecessors. This year, all UEFA units and FSR partners were invited to indicate the SDGs (and targets) that they deemed most representative of their contributions during the season, with icons at the start of their respective sections showing their responses. For further information on those contributions, readers are invited to contact the relevant unit/partner directly. Where SDGs are not referenced with specific targets within the report, stakeholders have, over the years, attested to the value of having a printed copy of the report in their hands, the decision not to print this season was made for environmental reasons. Finally, UEFA has decided not to print any copies of the report’s Sustainability Reporting Index section, with readers being invited to visit UEFA.com for news and resources falling outside the scope of this report. UEFA’s 2018/19 disciplinary income, earmarked for investment in FSR projects in 2019/20, totalled €4,380,000 (including €550,000 dedicated to supporting national associations in the wake of natural disasters, as part of the environment budget). A total of €609,200 was allocated to supporter relations in 2019/20: €480,000 from UEFA’s institutional supporters budget and €129,200 from the FSR budget. An additional budget category, ‘FSR education’, has been added this season to indicate investment in initiatives that aim to educate people on the subject of FSR. This includes investment in courses run by the UEFA Academy and people taking part in those courses. The unallocated balance of €25,000 was returned to the UEFA treasury. Scope The scope of this 2019/20 report is limited to activities carried out between 1 July 2019 and 30 June 2020. Like previous reports in this cycle, this season’s report takes a comprehensive look at UEFA’s commitment to social responsibility, covering internal activities and initiatives at UEFA, work carried out by external football and social responsibility (FSR) partners, good practices adopted by national associations and key contributions made by UEFA competitions. This report aims to share as much information on the season as possible; however, as a result of limitations caused by the COVID-19 pandemic, many planned activities and events were cancelled or postponed (both internal and external) were forced to adjust their operations to comply with health guidelines and restrictions. Background UEFA remains steadfast in its commitment to ensuring that the principles of social responsibility are firmly embedded in everything that it does. UEFA, in close cooperation with partner organisations, continues to support, foster and encourage social responsibility in all of its activities, as well as those of its 55 member associations and other stakeholders. UEFA aims to ensure clear and transparent reporting on all of the social responsibility activities that it undertakes or supports. The 2019/20 HatTrick FSR budget was €2,750,000 The Structure This report is divided into four main sections: • Inside UEFA • National associations • FSR portfolio partners • UEFA competitions As with previous reports in this cycle, Global Reporting Initiative (GRI) standards are cross-referenced with specific targets within the UN’s Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) in the report’s Sustainability Reporting Index section, with the aim of demonstrating UEFA’s contribution to global action on sustainable development. The #EqualGame campaign supports UEFA’s social responsibility objectives and promotes football for all abilities. The campaign was established as part of UEFA’s Respect initiative, following on the heels of the ‘No to Racism’ campaign. #EqualGame seeks to communicate the positive power of inclusion, show how the game can be enriched by increasing diversity and highlight European football’s role in making sport open and accessible to all.

In 2019/20, #EqualGame showcased compelling and inspiring stories about famous players and grassroots stars, as well as supporting a number of key events that amplified the campaign’s message.

Two recipients chosen for UEFA’s annual #EqualGame Award

In 2019/20, UEFA honoured German Bundesliga club Borussia Dortmund and Burnley FC fan Scott Cunliffe for their work supporting diversity, inclusion and accessibility in football. Borussia Dortmund received their award for the club’s tireless work combating extremist influences within their fan base, challenging everyday racism and adopting a clear policy on the rights of refugees and asylum-seekers. Meanwhile, devoted Burnley FC supporter Scott Cunliffe received his award for his successful RunAway Challenge, in which he ran to every one of Burnley FC’s away matches in the 2018/19 Premier League season, raising over €60,000 for Burnley FC in the Community, Burnley FC’s official charity.

More than 400 clubs and 35 national associations again participated in the FootballPeople weeks

During the Fare network’s FootballPeople weeks in October 2019, the UEFA Champions League, the UEFA Europa League, the European Qualifiers and the UEFA Women’s Champions League all served as platforms for messages combating racism, discrimination and intolerance in the game of football. At all 98 UEFA-organised matches between 10 and 24 October 2019, players lined up for pre-match photos with the referees and assistant referees, holding signs promoting UEFA’s #EqualGame hashtag. For the first time, all eight games in the round of 16 of the UEFA Women’s Champions League featured in this initiative.

Players, clubs and national teams taking part in the four competitions also used their own communication platforms to raise awareness and convey #EqualGame’s message. Portuguese champions SL Benfica, for example, became the first club to place UEFA’s #EqualGame logo on their official kit, one of a series of innovative actions that they carried out in support of the FootballPeople weeks. They also organised, in cooperation with UEFA, a pre-match event featuring club ambassadors Luisão and Nuno Gomes, whereby the two stars took part in a training session with over 200 children from the Benfica Foundation and the Benfica Football Schools.
Engaging and touching stories

As part of the #EqualGame campaign, UEFA selects individuals from its 55-member associations and shares their stories in the course of the season. The people chosen are all examples of how football promotes diversity, inclusion and accessibility, showing that a person’s disability, religion, sexuality, ethnicity or social background need not be a barrier to playing or enjoying football. Those #EqualGame stories come to life through video clips, written stories and photos, which are shared using UEFA’s various communication channels.

This season, #EqualGame highlighted many different stories, including these three memorable examples:

• Malcolm Steele from Aberdeen, Scotland, whose love for football and lifelong devotion to hometown club Aberdeen FC are proving crucial mainstays in his journey since being diagnosed with dementia

• Elvira Askerzade from Azerbaijan, who, after losing her mother at a young age, found comfort in football, becoming a promising goalkeeper and captain of her country’s national under-19 team

• Romani youngsters, who often face discrimination and have found that football can help to break down barriers and unify the community

SDGs 4, 5, 8, 10, 13, 16

Mission

Through a series of education and knowledge-sharing initiatives, the UEFA Academy leads and inspires the development of individuals and organisations with a view to continuously elevating the game of football.

UEFAacademy.com

Objectives

Ensure that everyone working in European football has the opportunity to develop their skills and knowledge, thereby supporting the game.

Make sure that participants have access to the latest research and knowledge on managing football organisations by working with leading academic institutions.

Engage with and connect individuals across Europe’s football landscape to ensure that best practices and innovations are shared, replicated and valued across the game.

Support national associations, as well as other confederations, by developing tailor-made programmes based on each association’s unique features and identified needs.

Highlight

Contributing to the professional management of football throughout Europe has been one of UEFA’s goals for many years. In light of the success of national editions of the UEFA Certificate in Football Management (CFM), which now boasts more than 1,000 graduates, UEFA has decided to open the programme up to people from outside of its member associations.

The UEFA Academy has thereby taken a major step towards diversity and inclusion by offering a management programme for anyone in the football industry who wishes to gain a comprehensive understanding of how the game is run. This open edition of the programme enables a wider audience to enhance their knowledge of the football industry, advance their career and acquire new management skills specific to the sport. Furthermore, this initiative also ensures an influx of new ideas and staff into the industry, fostering the development and professional management of football across Europe.

The first open edition of the CFM welcomed participants from 22 countries around the world, all of them coming from football-related organisations (clubs, leagues, media organisations, NGOs, supporters groups, etc.).

“The UEFA CFM programme has been instrumental in the growth of Cape Town City FC and myself as an individual. I have learnt so many fundamentals through the programme and have a better understanding of strategic and operational management within the football industry.”

Natalie Barlow, head of marketing, Cape Town City FC
Concluding remarks

Following its successful first year, the UEFA Academy achieved the objectives set for it last season, bringing more visibility to UEFA’s learning initiatives thanks to a brand new website and a unified catalogue. The 17 programmes available demonstrate UEFA’s awareness of the needs of European football stakeholders, with various learning initiatives being adapted and tailored to their requirements.

Additional achievements

- In response to COVID-19, the UEFA Academy launched a new SLO Education Programme. That programme gives supporter liaison officers (SLOs) the tools, knowledge and skills they need to tackle the complex challenges of their job. Two successful pilots were run in Denmark and Russia, with over 80 SLOs being trained.
- Participants in the second edition of the UEFA Executive Master for International Players (MIP) obtained their well-deserved diplomas from the University of Limoges. In parallel, the third edition of the programme started, with former internationals such as Didier Drogba, Julio César, Florent Malouda, Artur Moraes and Janne Madsen seeking to further the development of the game in their new careers as sports administrators.
- UEFA Academy launched the UEFA For Players app, which gives elite players essential information and advice, supporting them both on and off the pitch. More than 1,000 UEFA Youth League players have already accessed content through the app.
- The third edition of UEFA’s FSR Compact Course, organised jointly by UEFA and the University of St Gallen, brought together more than 30 FSR practitioners from different football organisations, reflecting on important FSR issues and challenges.
- The seventh edition of the Women in Football Leadership Programme (WFLP), organised in cooperation with FIFA and the IMD Business School, was attended by 24 women who were already in decision-making positions or had the potential to be leading football organisations in the near future.

Good Practice

Lessons learned from switching from face-to-face seminars to 100% online training

Objective
The objective of the UEFA Academy is to ensure that everyone working in football has the opportunity to develop their skills and knowledge by offering the best possible educational initiatives – even when training has to be completely online because of a global pandemic.

The Wow! factor
The UEFA Academy worked hard to develop and refine digital tools with a view to making the online classroom as stimulating and interesting as a physical environment. Almost all programmes and initiatives of the UEFA Academy have been transferred online and could be delivered successfully. For example, the much-loved simulation of a UEFA Champions League match has now been taken to a new level and digitalised, allowing participants to immerse themselves in a virtual UEFA Champions League match and experience the various behind-the-scenes operations.

Partners
The UEFA Academy teamed up with IT specialists and an external agency to develop the online simulation.

Link to good practice
UEFA Academy

With 23 days of online sessions taking place in the first half of 2020 (involving around 100 participants), the UEFA Academy is looking forward to organising many more in the second half of the year.

“I think it was a really proactive move from the UEFA Academy to ensure that the ongoing pandemic would not prevent participants from experiencing the simulation exercise. It definitely was a very reassuring thing for me as a participant, to know that the UEFA Academy was going above and beyond to make sure the course delivered as much value as possible. All in all, a very realistic, engaging and informative experience.”

Sid Kohli, participant in the first open edition of the CFM
Facility management

Mission
The facility management unit provides all of the services and support that are required to safely and sustainably operate and maintain all shared facilities, both on and off the UEFA campus in Nyon, Switzerland.

Objectives
Ensure that UEFA’s facilities are well maintained and valued, managing them flexibly while incorporating sustainability initiatives and targets.

Provide an innovative and flexible working environment that meets the current and future needs of employees and services by incorporating sustainable development.

Optimise the functioning of the organisation by putting in place the tools that are necessary to monitor, analyse and manage the unit’s activities in an efficient and sustainable way with a view to reducing CO2 emissions and energy consumption.

Ensure sustainable purchasing by using suppliers who respect UEFA’s Ecological Charter (in terms of both their products and their organisation) and improve UEFA’s inventory management to limit the number of orders and deliveries.

Highlight
The COVID-19 pandemic forced the facility management unit to quickly and efficiently adapt to the rapidly changing needs of UEFA and its staff. The unit’s first task in March 2020 was to locate face masks and disinfectant – items which proved difficult to find amid the early onslaught of the pandemic. The unit then carried out the following actions in order to make UEFA’s headquarters more secure:

- Installation of disinfection posts at the entrances to UEFA buildings and office spaces.
- Distribution of protective masks and disinfectant wipes to all employees.
- Complete disinfection of all UEFA buildings, including twice-daily disinfection of all door handles, dispensers, etc.
- Full disinfection and updating of all ventilation systems and filters.
- Installation of protective plexiglass at reception desks.
- Reduction in the number of people in conference rooms (enforced by limiting the number of chairs available).
- Establishment of a rota system within the facility management unit in order to comply with the new regulations.
- Implementation of COVID-19 informational signage and protective measures.
- Installation of infrared cameras at entrances to detect the temperatures of people entering buildings.
- Closure of cafeterias and implementation of a click-and-collect system for ordered meals.

1 UEFA’s facility management unit has adjusted its objectives relative to the 2018/19 season.
2 UEFA’s Ecological Charter is being worked on by several different units and will be published once it has been finalised.

The facility management team take turns working from home and from UEFA headquarters, offering the opportunity to understand the practical needs of employees in both situations.
Additional achievements

- UEFA more than met the energy efficiency target that it set itself for 2019/20, setting itself a goal of reducing its energy consumption by 1%, but achieving energy savings totalling 5%.
- UEFA has started to introduce waste recycling points, with the aim of removing individual waste bins altogether. It is hoped that this will reduce the number of plastic bin bags that end up in landfill by up to 90% in a single year, which equates to about 170,000 bags.
- UEFA has significantly increased the quantity and quality of lighting on the main pitch at Colovray sports centre, going from an average luminous intensity of 250 lux to a guaranteed 700 lux vertical. What is more, this has been achieved without any increase in UEFA’s electricity consumption. New technology and efficient automation have become indispensable allies in the unit’s search for maximum efficiency.
- UEFA is a major energy consumer and has implemented measures aimed at reducing its consumption and achieving targets set by the canton of Vaud.3 Agence Cleantech Suisse is in charge of monitoring developments on behalf of the federal authorities. UEFA has set up an environmental monitoring system for its energy consumption, which allows it to check its various energy efficiency assumptions. UEFA also publishes its energy labels in accordance with federal models.

In 2019/20, the facility management unit adapted its activities and plans in order to meet the changing needs of UEFA’s staff on account of the COVID-19 pandemic. The unit continues to place great emphasis on its commitment to continually reducing its environmental impact, while also striving to meet the needs of people who work for UEFA.”

Human resources

Mission
The human resources unit provides UEFA with talented and dedicated employees who embody the organisation’s values, ensures that staff have an effective and supportive working environment, provides support to all staff and contributes to the achievement of UEFA’s strategic objectives.

Objectives
Recruit talented individuals in order to achieve UEFA’s strategic objectives.

Develop staff members’ competencies and offer them training, coaching and support, resolving any conflicts that arise.

Design and update policies on staff matters and HR information systems.

Incentivise staff by offering competitive remuneration and benefits in line with UEFA’s culture, and organising staff events to celebrate and reward efforts.

Ensure that UEFA is a diverse and inclusive organisation and drive strategic diversity and inclusion (D&I) initiatives.

In order to respond to the unprecedented situation caused by the global pandemic, a dedicated COVID-19 task force was created. That task force, which sought to guide the organisation’s response to the situation, was supplemented by three working groups focusing on (i) the analysis of reports, technical documents and data in order to monitor the pandemic’s impact on UEFA, (ii) communication with staff, the public and stakeholders, and (iii) human resources issues.

Following the postponement of UEFA EURO 2020, the human resources unit led a staffing review looking at all fixed-term contracts relating to the final tournament. This resulted in UEFA letting 21 individuals go, but honouring the contracts of the other 250 contracted employees (with many being offered the opportunity to return in 2021 for the postponed tournament). In limiting the impact of the postponement to as few staff as possible, UEFA’s decision-making was driven by both a duty of care to staff and a very real desire to honour the UEFA president’s commitment to the UEFA Congress that football would prioritise ‘purpose over profit’.

Following the closure of UEFA’s offices because of COVID-19, the human resources unit had to adapt its ways of working to ensure that all daily activities and support for business operations could be delivered digitally and remotely (including the calculation and payment of salaries, work permit requests, the signing of contracts and other administrative documents, the implementation of coaching, assessments and training, and the organisation of sensitive meetings).

A three-stage plan for employees’ return to UEFA’s offices in Nyon was prepared by human resources and agreed with UEFA’s senior management.

As part of a strategic approach, the unit reviewed all HR policies and procedures, filling in any gaps as required, with the objective of producing a comprehensive guide available to all employees, ensuring greater transparency, and evaluating the inclusivity of those policies and procedures.

That guide, which covers just under 42 procedures and policies, comprises three main sections:
1. Bringing new talent to UEFA
2. Working and developing at UEFA
3. Leaving UEFA

UEFA also embarked on the process of carrying out an equal salary audit with the aim of becoming equal salary-certified. As an important step towards ensuring an inclusive environment and workplace, the human resources unit started collecting the data it needed for the first stage of the audit, which involves a review of data. If the organisation successfully completes that stage, the 2020/21 season will see further qualitative reviews using surveys, focus groups and interviews.

Concluding remarks

The COVID-19 pandemic has put a huge amount of stress on the organisation. Like every other unit at UEFA, the human resources unit had to quickly change its ways of working to support the organisation in that time of need. Supporting staff members, communicating about the pandemic in a transparent way and ensuring that the organisation always put people first were all key drivers for the human resources unit.”

Human resources unit

Additional achievements

- UEFA’s staff regulations supplement individual employment contracts, defining the working conditions of all members of staff. In 2019/20, directors, heads of unit, the legal and finance divisions, and the staff council were all consulted on an update to those regulations with a view to meeting the organisation’s needs and defining the manner in which UEFA employees are expected to work together for the good of European Football.

- UEFA recognises a non-binary scale of gender identification. UEFA presents statistics based on a male/female perspective, as this is the current perspective recorded in accordance with the Swiss Civil Code.

Planned activities

2020
- Finalise all EURO 2020-related human resources projects

2021
- Publish the guide to UEFA’s human resources policies and procedures
- Complete UEFA’s equal salary audit
- Review and revise UEFA’s policy on working from home

2022
- Complete UEFA’s equal salary audit
- Review and revise UEFA’s policy on working from home

Mission
The anti-match-fixing unit seeks to combat match-fixing in all its forms and safeguard the integrity of European football and its competitions.

Objectives
- Provide support and expertise with a view to developing capacity at national level through a network of integrity officers in the 55 member associations.
- Implement UEFA’s legal framework while examining suspected cases of match manipulation and supporting UEFA ethics and disciplinary inspectors in their investigations.
- Educate players, match officials, coaches and administrators about (i) the risks and dangers associated with match-fixing, (ii) the various rules and responsibilities, and (iii) how to confidentially report issues to the competent organs/bodies.
- Monitor worldwide betting markets to identify irregular activity and conduct preliminary investigations looking at suspicious matches and individuals.
- Promote cooperation and information-sharing with national and international stakeholders, notably law enforcement authorities.

Highlight
In October 2019, after its Executive Committee meeting in Ljubljana, Slovenia, UEFA announced that it would be undertaking a feasibility study looking at the fight against match-fixing in European football. In order to better counter the increasing integrity threats facing European football, UEFA commissioned external research with the aim of assessing whether international cooperation between football bodies, state authorities and other stakeholders could be structured and resourced more effectively.

This initiative came about following observations that, despite the excellent work done by many stakeholders with the aim of addressing match-fixing in sport, the problem of match-fixing had grown in recent years, and the threat to European football remained significant. This study will look at various different ways of ensuring effective cooperation with stakeholders in the fight against on-field corruption in European football. The study will continue into 2021 and will present various possible structural changes for UEFA’s consideration with a view to better combating match-fixing in all 55 member countries.

Additional achievements
- In January 2020, with the support of the UEFA Academy, the anti-match-fixing unit launched the Football Integrity Programme (FIP) Winter School, which will make a significant contribution to the development of training and the building of capacity. That week-long formal training...

- Intensive monitoring of betting markets and increased intelligence gathering
- Internal ‘Football and Betting’ workshop
- Review of education material and development of an overall strategy towards awareness and education activities
- Operational deployment of the integrity action plan for EURO 2020 in all host cities

Course featured presentations by sports integrity experts, group work and practical exercises, giving practitioners from national associations the knowledge and practical skills that they need to tackle match-fixing.

- The unit continues to provide key information to relevant authorities and national associations with a view to tackling match-fixing and dismantling criminal networks that target football players, referees and clubs.

- A player who was found to have committed the UEFA Disciplinary Regulations in a match-fixing case is now taking part in educational campaigns and initiatives in cooperation with UEFA. His video testimony and first-hand experience are powerful tools in education sessions and make a big difference when it comes to reaching other players (particularly young players) who have the potential to become involved in match-fixing.

Medical

Objectives

- Protect all players taking part in UEFA competitions by requiring pre-competition medical examinations and regulating medical services at matches.

- Support the development of football medicine across Europe by running education and training programmes for medical professionals in all member associations.

- Organise long-term injury studies for both men’s and women’s football, including the UEFA Elite Club Injury Study, in order to understand how and why injuries occur and promote the adoption of injury prevention strategies as a standard practice.

- Organise and support research looking at key football-related medical issues.

- Provide support and guidance to medical professionals working in football.

Mission

The medical unit assists national associations and clubs with football medicine and sports science in order to safeguard and enhance players’ physical and psychological well-being.

In 2019/20, UEFA launched a concussion awareness campaign with the aim of educating players, coaches, referees, doctors and the general public about the issue of concussion in football. That campaign sought to improve concussion management and increase understanding of the issues surrounding concussions. The issue of concussion was raised within UEFA following several high-profile cases in major UEFA competitions.

The campaign used several educational tools, including a concussion awareness and procedure poster, which is now displayed in all dressing rooms, medical rooms and referees’ rooms.

A medical video review system was set up for the finals of the UEFA Champions League, the UEFA Europa League, the UEFA Women’s Champions League and the UEFA Nations League, as well as the UEFA Super Cup, allowing team doctors to review live match footage and assess potential concussion incidents. UEFA’s Executive Committee has also raised this issue with FIFA and the IFAB, asking them to review the Laws of the Game and consider the introduction of appropriate measures (such as temporary replacements) in order to reduce the pressure on medical staff and give doctors more time to assess a potential concussion off the pitch, so that concussed players never return to the field of play.

Additional achievements

- A second UEFA Football Doctor Education Programme (FDEP) workshop on injury diagnosis and treatment was held in Clairefontaine, France, in September 2019.
- UEFA issued practical guidelines on heading the ball for young footballers, with the aim of safeguarding their health and ensuring their safety in both training and matches.
- As part of preparations for EURO 2020, UEFA collated and centralised the medical concepts for each of the 12 host cities, with a view to sharing them with the team doctors of the 24 participating teams.
- UEFA issued specific cascading and funding guidelines for UEFA HatTrick incentive payments in order to allow the 55 national associations to organise their own editions of the UEFA FDEP at national level.
- UEFA published a new version of its Medical Regulations in March 2020, including details of a new mandatory neurological screening requirement for UEFA's top competitions.
- Chief medical officers of participating EURO 2020 teams each produced a dedicated ‘medical care concept’ for their countries, based on medical requirements for the tournament.
- UEFA organised its first elite club injury study in women’s football, in which 12 women’s teams participated. They provided injury data for the whole 2018/19 season to help identify injury patterns, facilitate injury prevention and increase general knowledge of injuries in women’s football. In May 2019, a post-season meeting was held to share the findings from the study.

- EURO 2020 Concussion Management Charter – date unconfirmed at time of writing
- Post-season meetings for women’s and men’s injury studies – date unconfirmed at time of writing
- Workshop for EURO 2020 finalists organised in January 2021 and an additional workshop to be organised in March/April with the CMOs and team doctors

Concluding remarks

“UEFA has delivered key messages in the area of football medicine with a view to safeguarding the health and well-being of players, especially as regards its concussion awareness campaign and its guidelines on heading the ball. The introduction of these two educational tools will hopefully further improve the safety of football players.”

Anti-doping

Mission
The anti-doping unit delivers comprehensive testing programmes in cooperation with national anti-doping organisations (NADOs), as well as supporting anti-doping education programmes in order to increase footballers’ awareness of the dangers and consequences of doping.

UEFA.com/insideuefa/protecting-the-game/anti-doping

Objectives

Train and manage a panel of doping control officers (DCOs) in order to deliver a high-quality testing programme.

Work with NADOs to ensure that comprehensive anti-doping programmes are in operation throughout European football.

Monitor anti-doping efforts at national level across Europe.

Develop biological passports for all players competing in UEFA competitions.

Produce anti-doping regulations for all UEFA competitions in compliance with the World Anti-Doping Code drawn up by the World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA).

Educate players, team doctors and support personnel on anti-doping matters.

In 2019/20, the main technological focus was on the development of UEFA’s new whereabouts app, which is set to be released in September 2020 following testing. This app is designed to capture and help manage teams’ whereabouts, allowing teams to manage player lists, create team activities (such as training sessions and matches) and submit their weekly whereabouts information to UEFA and their NADO. The main goal of this project is to create a tool that will help teams to manage their whereabouts information in an easy and efficient way.

The app, which will be used to share information between stakeholders and organise doping controls, benefits from its link to UEFA’s TIME platform, which facilitates administrative tasks at club level.

The app will initially be made available to UEFA Champions League teams. If that proves to be a success, it may then be rolled out to teams that reach the quarter-finals of the UEFA Europa League and teams which qualified to the EURO 2020 Final Tournament.

Main achievements
• A new COVID-19 testing procedure was implemented with additional sanitary precautions, and a leaflet on testing and safety was published for players.
• In-competition and out-of-competition testing procedures were developed, although testing was halted for several months on account of COVID-19.

  - FEB: Anti-doping activities at venues during EURO 2020

Concluding remarks

The primary objective of the anti-doping unit during the COVID-19 pandemic is to adapt our procedures in order to ensure the safety of players, staff and DCOs. Every process has been reviewed and is in line with WADA’s sanitary recommendations and the Return To Play protocol.”

* All DCO candidate workshops were cancelled on account of the COVID-19 pandemic.
 Some DCO audits were cancelled on account of the COVID-19 pandemic.
Objectives

Offer stadium and security strategy summits and masterclasses to individual national associations.

Offer joint training programmes for club and stadium safety and security officers and police commanders in individual countries.

Host the annual pan-European stadium and security conference, and organise pan-European expert seminars attended by representatives of all 55 national associations and their respective public authorities.

Develop action plans in cooperation with individual national associations seeking to implement the integrated approach to safety, security and service; and monitor progress using a national association dashboard.

Develop, maintain and disseminate a suite of knowledge products, training programmes and support services for all 55 national associations and other confederations.

Mission

The UEFA Stadium and Security Strategy and Development Programme aims to improve safety and security by combining strategic, tactical and operational considerations, applying a multi-agency approach and employing best practices.

Highlight

For the 18th consecutive season, the UEFA Stadium and Security Conference was the focal point of the stadium and security unit’s year. That conference took place in September 2019 in Athens under the theme of ‘Learning Together’, with 360 participants coming together to review the 2018/19 season, reflect on the lessons learned and kick-start the safety and security planning for UEFA’s main competitions in the 2019/20 season.

One particular area of focus at that conference was the issue of violence and disorder. Delegates voted on a large number of questions relating to that issue, with an overwhelming majority of participants (more than 85%) indicating that ineffective prosecution and punishment processes were an obstacle to tackling football violence and disorder across Europe. Effective exclusion of trouble-making fans was widely regarded as the single most important method of tackling the problem. There was also general agreement that governments and public authorities had to take the lead in order to ensure that bans were universal in scope.

More than 85% of the 350 delegates polled felt that ineffective prosecution and punishment processes were an obstacle to tackling football violence and disorder across Europe.

This event is unique in bringing together clubs, police, national associations and other key partners. As we will see and hear shortly, stadium safety and security incidents continue despite our efforts. We are facing a more volatile stadium environment, which is of course a reflection of the more volatile world we live in. The best way for us to keep ahead of the game is to constantly learn from what is going on and apply those lessons to prevent future incidents. Let me encourage you to join me in learning together about solutions to the problems we all face.”

Theodore Theodordinis, UEFA general secretary, opening the 2019 UEFA Stadium and Security Conference

Additional achievements

- Under the leadership of Michael van Praag, chairman of the Stadium and Security Committee, the unit continued to tackle the issue of pyrotechnics. Michael was invited to address the European Club Association and secured club presidents’ support for UEFA’s efforts to promote its ‘no safe use’ message in European football grounds.
- In partnership with European experts, the unit developed a new National Football Police Training Programme, which was successfully delivered in both Turkey and Hungary. The Turkish police then took the course (including all of UEFA’s materials) to all of the country’s various regions.
- Anticipating changes to future working practices, the unit adapted its current strategic and tactical materials so as to be able to offer a toolbox of products and services which can be delivered either online, on site or on the job. New programmes were developed with a view to helping national associations to enhance operational readiness.
- Owing to the nature of this unit’s work, events are constantly being planned in cooperation with authorities and national associations, which are then reported annually. Consequently, no targets are set for future seasons. It should also be noted that the COVID-19 pandemic affected the unit’s work in 2019/20, resulting in fewer events and activities.
- In 2019/20, programmes were organised in cooperation with the national associations of Poland, Russia and Azerbaijan.
UEFA’s four-year Stadium and Security Strategy and Development Programme (2017/18–2020/21) is now moving into its final season, with years three and four being considerably disrupted by the pandemic. That work will therefore continue in subsequent years. The challenging political, economic and social environment across Europe will continue to be reflected in European football, and the programme’s work will help national associations to meet those demands.”

Football Federation of Armenia

FFA Fan Dialogue

Challenge
In the past, some Armenian Premier League (APL) matches suffered from low attendance figures. The situation was exacerbated by the fact that many APL clubs did not have fan groups, meaning that there was very little dialogue with clubs, the league or the Football Federation of Armenia (FFA).

Goal
The goal of this project was to improve communication with fans through a process of democratic dialogue, in order to establish a meaningful relationship that could increase fans’ loyalty to clubs and the league, while raising attendance levels at APL games.

Partners
- Three APL clubs: FC Pyunik, FC Urartu and FC Lori

What's next?
Following the success of the Supporters Football League, the FFA plans to organise an annual tournament for fans, involving teams representing all APL clubs, to be held in parallel with the APL season.

Special Power League

Challenge

Children with disabilities do not often have access to sport or adequate opportunities to play it, which can cause them to be excluded from society and prevented from interacting with others.

Goal

The primary aim of this project was to improve awareness of – and the approach to – disability football in Croatia, using sport to help children with learning or physical disabilities (as well as other socially disadvantaged children) to integrate into society.

Partners

• Health Life Academy
• Former Croatian president Kolinda Grabar-Kitarović
• Five first division clubs: GNK Dinamo Zagreb, NK Istra 1961, NK Osijek, NK Slaven Koprivnica and HNK Hajduk Split
• One second division club: NK Medimurje Čakovec
• Three technical partners: - Regional upbringing and education centres - Mateo Kovačić Foundation - SLab Association - smaller foundations/organisations

The Wow! factor

Each club has the task of establishing a section for children with disabilities, using a manual on working with children with disabilities. Coaches from the clubs work hand in hand with partners from education centres, as well as external professionals with experience of working with children. Having the chance to play in official club kit means a great deal to the children taking part, so every tournament is held in high regard.

What’s next?

This initiative will continue in future seasons, with four annual tournaments being added, children’s football sessions taking place at other clubs, and the manual on working with children with disabilities being finalised. Project partners will also seek to involve more clubs and sponsors in the initiative, as well as encouraging and rewarding volunteers who are already involved. Ultimately, however, the future evolution of the project will be dependent on the COVID-19 situation in Croatia.

If we want to be a more civilised society without any prejudices or limitations, we must take action and dedicate ourselves to the development of sports, individual citizens and society as a whole. Using football as a tool (clubs, players, coaches, etc.), we can work on the development of skills, knowledge, fair play, teamwork and self-discipline, as well as fostering inclusion within society.
Football for Health

Challenge
Health issues involving high blood pressure, high cholesterol, low bone density, muscle imbalances, poor fitness and obesity all lead to increased health risks, particularly in the 40+ age group.

Goal
To improve public health through targeted intervention in the area of football fitness, with a focus on those in the 40+ age group (particularly women).

Partners
- Health and fitness instructors
- Centre of Health Sciences, University of the Faroe Islands
- The Faroese Public Health Council

The Wow! factor
This project involves a range of different stakeholders (including local football clubs, health and fitness instructors, and scientific researchers) working together to help boost the physical and mental health of people over the age of 40, with benefits resulting from both physical activity and social interaction. Most of the participants were women who had never played football before.

What’s next?
The COVID-19 pandemic has had a significant impact on the Football for Health project, with various activities being cancelled in the 2019/20 season because of restrictions imposed by local authorities. Consequently, the first objective in the forthcoming 2020/21 season will be to get the project back to the level it was at in 2019, before focusing on taking the project forward. Once it has reached that stage, the goal will be to work with smaller municipalities on rolling the project out in areas with no organised football.

Studies and research have confirmed that recreational football can be used as a tool for the prevention and treatment of various non-communicable diseases and as an effective broad-spectrum prevention, treatment and rehabilitation strategy for a wide range of patient groups.

“Research has shown that small-sided football is an intense, versatile combination of strength, endurance and aerobic high-intensity interval training, and that twice-weekly one-hour sessions can be used for prevention, treatment or rehabilitation with non-communicable diseases such as hypertension, type 2 diabetes, osteopenia and prostate cancer.”

Magni Mohr, chairman of the Faroese council for public health
Respect for the Environment

Challenge
With climate change becoming an ever more pressing subject around the world, it is important that people and organisations look for solutions with a view to minimising their environmental footprint.

Goal
To make the Liechtenstein Football Association a role model in the area of climate action by promoting the careful use of environmental resources, reducing water consumption, providing match tickets that include the use of public transport, recycling all waste at football matches, and using energy from renewable sources whenever possible (including the use of a photovoltaic system to compensate for non-renewable energy used).

Partners
• Municipality of Vaduz

The Wow! factor
The Liechtenstein Football Association worked with experts to identify areas where renewable and sustainable materials could be used in place of less environmentally friendly options. By purchasing local products, the association reduced the impact of transport, and by recycling and reusing existing materials, it increased the potential life cycle of those materials. In addition, the association’s new pitch heating system offers a number of advantages from an environmental perspective, such as protection of the ground water from anti-freeze and greater control over energy consumption through the ability to divide the pitch into different heating zones.

Following the municipality’s decision to use a pitch heating system, the association worked with experts in the planning process to ensure that the system in question was as energy neutral as possible, ultimately ensuring that at least 60% of all energy consumed was recovered through compensation measures.

The Liechtenstein Football Association is proud that, in cooperation with the stadium’s owner (the municipality of Vaduz), it is making a major contribution to the further improvement of the Rheinpark Stadion in terms of the ecological impact of the facility. The association is fully aware of football’s responsibility to society as a whole and is committed to increasing environmental awareness.

Youth Ambassadors of Change

Challenge
Under the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, children have the right to have a say in matters that affect them and for those views to be taken seriously by decision-makers. If football is to be a safe place and as enjoyable as possible, there needs to be a culture in which children are encouraged to share their thoughts and experiences, and value needs to be attributed to their thoughts within football.

Goal
The goal of this project is to establish and run a Youth Congress representing young Scots’ interests and opinions on football, creating a system whereby children and young people can have a real impact on the running of football in Scotland. The Scottish FA will thereby begin to create a culture in which children’s views are more respected and valued at all levels of the game.

Partners
- Youth Ambassadors of Change
- Scottish FA staff
- Member clubs
- Referees associations

The Wow! factor
The Youth Ambassadors represent the many different ways in which young people engage with football, whether as players, coaches, referees, supporters, gamers, social media consumers, etc. The Youth Ambassadors programme empowers young people to participate in matters that affect them. For example, in 2019 the Youth Ambassadors campaigned and worked with staff on the issue of menstruation products, with the result that the Scottish FA became the first national association in the world to make those products freely available for staff, visitors and fans at its national stadium. The Youth Ambassadors have also contributed to the Scottish FA’s communication plans, its new girls and women’s football strategy, and its work supporting mental health.

What’s next?
The Scottish FA and the Youth Ambassadors of Change will continue to work together to promote the views of young people in the game. The current class of ambassadors will graduate from their roles in June 2021, and a new group will be recruited.

The Young Ambassadors programme has given me the opportunity to make a real difference on an issue that I am passionate about. Young people are supported and encouraged to make their voices heard, and our views are consistently taken into account by those in decision-making roles.

Anna O’Donnell, Youth Ambassador of Change

The UEFA Refugee Grant Scheme aims to help national associations with funding for refugee-related projects that use the power of football to bring people together, foster mutual understanding and break down prejudice.

Through the massive and unprecedented movement of refugees into and within Europe has started to slow in recent years, the refugee population within Europe remains marginalised and vulnerable. As those individuals attempt to begin rebuilding their lives in new locations, many are still stuck in camps, with no idea when – or, indeed, if – they will be invited into European communities. For those who have already begun the process of integrating and learning about their new community’s culture and language, they are embarking on that adjustment while still living with and working through the emotional and physical trauma of the events that have led to their current situation.

UEFA remains committed to supporting the inclusion and integration of refugees, providing funding through dedicated national association projects. Football, and sport in general, can really help to bring communities together, bridging cultural gaps and providing a common and universal language that can be understood and enjoyed by all. Through football, refugees and host communities have the opportunity to learn about each other, build connections and overcome prejudices.

Chosen for their innovative and effective ideas, the six projects that were awarded funding under the UEFA Refugee Grant Scheme in 2019/20 were:

- Bosnia and Herzegovina – Social Integration through Football
- Greece – Social Integration of Children
- Iceland – Football for Refugees/Asylum Seekers
- Romania – Football 4 Refugees
- Sweden – One Step Forward
- Turkey – Friendship of Football

UEFA Football and Social Responsibility Report 2019/20
Royal Netherlands Football Association (KNVB) Refugee Team

Challenge
With many refugee-related football projects, the primary focus is on getting refugees to join local clubs and supporting integration. The KNVB believes that this is a good first step in the integration process, but that football can do more for refugees.

Goal
The KNVB sought to highlight the problem of high unemployment among refugees and use professional football clubs to help with the integration process.

Stakeholders and partners
- Refugee Team – social enterprise
- Regional municipalities
- Language schools
- Educational institutions
- Dutch professional football clubs

What’s next?
As the project develops further, the KNVB will work with potential employers to create and advertise job opportunities for refugees. It will continue to find placements for refugees, as well as expanding its network of volunteers and volunteering opportunities.

Related resources
KNVB Voetbal Refugeeteam

I met a lot of new people, since I started volunteering at PSV. With one guy I will have dinner soon and another guy will support me with writing a good application letter next week.”

Mahdi Khalaf, PSV Eindhoven

The Wow! factor
The KNVB Refugee Team members work as volunteers at all professional football organisations in the Dutch province of North Brabant. Through those volunteering opportunities, refugees are able to experience and participate in Dutch society, gain useful work experience and make contacts. At the same time, local businesses with links to those professional football organisations (such as sponsors, suppliers and business partners) help team members to find jobs.

The KNVB believes that grassroots clubs can also play a key role in promoting integration. Dutch grassroots clubs have more than a million members, with thousands of people visiting their favourite local club every weekend. Fans are proud of their clubs and cities, and that represents a key part of their identity. For refugees, getting access to the local football club is a way of becoming part of that community.

Football can be a unifying force when it comes to integration, acting as a universal language that brings people together.

Of the regular 21 refugee participants in the Refugee Team, three were guided to a paid jobs or internships, four entered into study programmes, and five found structural work experience placements.

Diversity and inclusion
The FootballPeople weeks are supported by UEFA through its men’s and women’s Champions Leagues, the Europa League and the EURO 2020 qualifiers. In 2019, nearly 200 professional clubs, 56 national associations and 16 leagues and players’ unions participated in the FootballPeople weeks.

Mission

The Fare network involves NGOs, minority groups, grassroots organisations and the professional football industry working together in a joint effort to celebrate diversity and combat racism, homophobia, sexism and other forms of discrimination at all levels of the game.

farenet.org

Objectives

Tackle discrimination of all kinds at all levels of football in Europe and encourage diversity in the football industry.

Use the power of football to explore and raise awareness of solutions to discrimination and exclusion.

Empower and represent groups that are marginalised and suffer discrimination.

Highlight

The FootballPeople weeks are the largest social change and diversity event in the football calendar, being celebrated in more than 60 countries. The 2019 event saw around 1,500 activities organised across Europe and Beyond with over 163,000 people participating, including more than 2,000 refugees and asylum seekers. 15,000 people took part in grassroots training sessions, games and tournaments and Fare awarded grants for 89 activities.

The FootballPeople weeks are a global initiative and are open to everyone across all levels of football, with participants including national associations, football clubs, supporters groups, ethnic minority groups, LGBT+ groups, women’s groups, football activists, educational institutions and other NGOs.

Those participants are all united in their love of the game and their belief that football belongs to everyone and can be used to effect positive changes. Different types of activity are organised in order to campaign for social change and create opportunities for marginalised communities to participate in football, with events including conferences, anti-racism film festivals and photo exhibitions, fan choreographies and panel discussions.

The FootballPeople weeks are very valuable in standing up for equality and showing solidarity through action as part of a global campaign. The League of Tolerance organised a courageous #FootballForShe national conference in 2019, with over 150 female players, coaches and managers coming together to show that they are visible and have the potential to be successful in the football environment in Ukraine. The FootballPeople weeks are a great way of creating more inclusive opportunities for girls and women to play and enjoy their favourite sport, and we will use it to continue to fight for gender equality in our communities.”

Nastya Vasylyshyn, youth football coach, League of Tolerance
Additional achievements

• Fare, as part of the Football Including Refugees in Europe (FIRE) project, organised four pilot interventions in cooperation with the Scottish Football Association, the Royal Belgian Football Association, the Romanian Football Federation and the LaLiga Foundation. Participating organisations received funding and organised activities. 16 Fare produced a report on those pilot interventions, which was published on 20 June 2020 – World Refugee Day.

• A research study looking at how best to include refugee women in sport was conducted as part of the REfugee Women INclusion through Sports (REWINS) project, summarising data and best practices gathered in Greece, Denmark and Italy. REWINS is an EU-funded project aimed at promoting positive attitudes towards refugee women in the field of sport.

• In February 2020, Fare marked Football v Homophobia month by providing 26 grants in 20 countries across Europe in support of activities challenging homophobia and improving access to and participation in the game for members of the LGBT+ community.

• Six Fare members in eastern Europe were awarded grants in order to run projects addressing ongoing issues of racism, anti-Semitism and homophobia. Some of the funding for those projects came from Fare’s partnership with Chelsea FC’s Final Whistle on Hate initiative. 17

• Two online events were organised during the global lockdown as part of Fare’s ongoing commitment to the empowerment of ethnic minority women in football. The first event was a session aimed at examining the disproportionate impact that the pandemic was having on ethnic minority women and looking at how best to support one another in order to overcome the associated challenges. The second event was an online Q&A session with PSG and Danish international forward Nadia Nadim, discussing women, refugees, racism, Islam and athlete activism within football.

16 Over 1,000 people participated in each of those activities, with refugees accounting for 34% of all participants.
17 Those projects were initially intended to run for six months, up to December 2020, but the programme was likely to be extended into 2021 as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic.
18 A significant number of matches will be played behind closed doors in 2020/21 on account of the COVID-19 pandemic.
19 A new UEFA club competition is due to start in 2021/22 – the UEFA Europa Conference League.
20 These are matches that are observed in person.
21 Bulgaria, Slovakia, Hungary, Romania, Serbia, Georgia, Italy, Scotland and Montenegro.
22 Russia and Italy.
23 Hungary, Russia, Ukraine, Slovakia, Romania, Croatia, Italy, Germany and Bulgaria. However, all member associations and all clubs participating in the Champions League and the Europa League are known to use the Fare Guide to Discriminatory Signs and Symbols in European Football.

Concluding remarks

“We believe that we have developed the tools and ideas we need to meet the demands of 2020 and beyond, and to develop the movement we have created. It will be important moving forward that society and the football industry face up to the issues that have been given added focus by the Black Lives Matter movement and the loud call for greater gender equality across Europe. The resources to deliver genuine diversity and equality are available, and we very much hope that the industry will use them and meet the challenges head on.”

Piara Powar, executive director, Fare network
Objective
To develop a series of online events in order to stay in touch with our members and continue discussions and some activities during the COVID-19 lockdown period.

The Wow! factor
In April 2020, Fare conducted a survey in order to better understand how the pandemic was affecting members’ organisations, their work and the communities they worked with. Feedback from that survey indicated that, for our members, there was a critical need to carry on working within their respective communities during the pandemic. Against that background, Fare supported its members and its network at large by organising a series of online events, which not only provided thought-provoking content, but also fostered personal connections by providing space for discussion and helping them to grow their communities.

Fare used the shift online to open its community up to a wider audience, encouraging the Ethnic Minority Women's Group to 'bring a friend' to online sessions in order to expand an under-represented network and enable more people to engage in in-depth explorations of topics such as Black Lives Matter, athlete activism, refugees and sexism within football.

Never Again Association (NAA)

Mission
The NAA promotes multicultural understanding and contributes to the development of democratic civil society in central and eastern Europe.

neveragainassociation.org

Objectives

Teach young people to reject racial and ethnic prejudice through educational and cultural events with anti-racism and anti-discrimination messages.

Publish and distribute educational materials on issues such as racism, anti-Semitism, xenophobia and discrimination.

Monitor and document instances of hate speech, discrimination and hate crime inside and outside stadiums.

Take part in public debates to promote respect for diversity.

In a thank you letter to the NAA, Michal, an inmate, wrote: “We say NO to confusing nationalism with patriotism in any manner!” This was the first such project at the prison and, according to Michal, was greatly appreciated by inmates.

Over the years, the NAA has implemented numerous initiatives promoting diversity and respect in cooperation with prison staff and inmates. The aim of such educational activities is to promote positive societal values among inmates and young people at risk of marginalisation.

Additional achievements

- The NAA published two special reports in 2020. The first, “The Virus of Hate”, documented xenophobia during the COVID-19 pandemic, with examples from the world of sport. The second, “Racism Returns to the Stadiums”, documented support for Janusz Waluś in the form of banners and slogans displayed in football stadiums.

- Educational and cultural events with anti-racism and anti-discrimination messages were co-organised and promoted, including sports activities, concerts, exhibitions, book launches, film screenings and festivals. In addition to the events’ participants, a much larger audience was reached through media reports on those events. Some events were cancelled as a result of the pandemic, but others continued as online activities.

- A large number of educational materials (including anti-racism leaflets, booklets, stickers and other materials) were published and distributed at numerous events. The target group for the distribution of those materials included young football fans, as well as participants at festivals and other cultural events.

- The NAA monitored and documented instances of hate speech and hate crime inside and outside stadiums, in cooperation with its network of local correspondents, journalists and football stakeholders. In addition to eyewitness accounts, social media posts and far-right publications were also monitored. Incidents were documented in the Brown Book (a registry of hate crimes), with information made available to interested media organisations and stakeholders.

- The NAA continued to participate in public debates and promote anti-discrimination messages. The association was consulted and quoted by numerous local, national and international media organisations, and its own social media presence also grew.

Planned activities

For the annual Pol’and’Rock Festival (August 2020), the NAA will conduct online activities throughout August, encouraging both online participation and socially distant sporting activities with an anti-racism message.

Continued production and distribution of educational materials, with particular emphasis on online distribution on account of the pandemic.38

Continued monitoring and documentation of hate speech, discrimination and hate crime throughout the season.

Concluding remarks

“The NAA is determined to continue and expand its work tackling the twin scourges of racism and xenophobia, both in football and beyond.”

Rafał Pankowski, NAA
rafal@neveragainassociation.org

34 Owing to the COVID-19 pandemic, this event will primarily take the form of online music activities. In addition to online activities, a record will be produced.
35 Some of the planned events were cancelled, postponed or moved online on account of the COVID-19 pandemic.
36 The figure was lower than expected for two reasons: first, the COVID-19 pandemic dominated news coverage and football was suspended; and second, political control of Polish state radio and TV meant that the NAA had limited access to those media channels.
37 This figure was lower than expected for two reasons: first, the COVID-19 pandemic dominated news coverage and football was suspended; and second, political control of Polish state radio and TV meant that the NAA had limited access to those media channels.
38 In addition, the NAA is also actively working on a strategy to minimise waste caused by the materials it distributes. In the 2019/20 season (as in previous seasons), it exercised care when distributing its materials and made a point of minimising litter.
Mission

The Kick It Out (KIO) Israel project seeks to combat racism, sexism, homophobia and all other forms of discrimination in football, promoting peaceful coexistence, sharing of society and equal opportunities, regardless of race, religion, gender or sexual orientation.

nif.org

Objectives

Combat, reduce and eventually eliminate racism, incitement, violence and all other forms of discrimination, including sexism and homophobia, at football matches and online.

Conduct an effective campaign aimed at combating racism and promoting inclusivity through the involvement of star players (the Team for Social Responsibility), who act as positive role models and use their celebrity status to set trends.

Actively monitor racist comments by fans and promote KIO’s values on social media platforms.

After a successful pilot in 2018/19, this breakthrough programme moved up a gear in 2019/20, with a range of showcase events, in addition to coaching sessions. The programme was launched during KIO’s FootballPeople weeks in October 2019. A major open day event was held for the media on International Women’s Day in early March 2020, at which KIO Israel’s work promoting women’s football was also emphasised.

The Team of Equals is the female version of a successful boys’ programme that has been operating in Jerusalem for more than five years. The programme is unique in that it encourages equal use of the Hebrew and Arabic languages, with Jewish, Arab and bilingual coaches. The participants’ Jewish and Arab families are also heavily involved in the programme, getting to know each other socially and celebrating each other’s holidays and events.

Without the good relationships and trust that have been established by the boys’ programme over the years, it is unlikely that it would have been possible to launch a girls’ programme in communities that have not traditionally seen the importance of women participating in activities outside of the home (both in the field of sport and in other areas of life).

Additional achievements

• For the third season in a row, a Team for Social Responsibility was established in partnership with the Israel Football Association and the Israel Football Players Organisation. In 2019/20, the Team for Social Responsibility attended 12 events to promote KIO’s mission and objectives, took part in TV and radio interviews and wrote opinion pieces for newspapers and websites.

• Volunteer observers compiled information for the KIO Fairness Index, finding that there were only 13 major racist incidents at matches in Israel’s top division, down from 19 in the previous season (although only 70% of matches were played in front of crowds in 2019/20).

• KIO partnered with the Israel Football Association to stage a Football v Homophobia match between the mixed LGBTQ-straight Rainbow team and a team of artists and celebrities in August 2019. Meanwhile, clubs accepted KIO’s argument that homophobic chanting was on a par with racist chanting and acknowledged that disciplinary action would be taken against fans making such chants.

• A match was played involving young Arabs from the town of Tira and young Jews from the nearby town of Herzliya, all of whom were considered to be in high-risk categories. The participants formed mixed Jewish-Arab teams and afterwards held a discussion on racism.

• A clip about women in football was produced as part of KIO Israel’s campaign to promote women’s football.

Highlight

“The Israel Jewish-Arab Girls’ Team of Equals is made up of 30 seventh and eighth grade girls from two Jerusalem teams (Hapoel Katamon and the Arab Football Academy of Beit Safafa) and is the only programme in Israel that brings together Arab and Jewish girls.”

I believe that there is no difference between Jews and Arabs. The girls are happy playing together, bonds are created between them, and they become friends.”

FSR Portfolio Partners

UEFA Respect Diversity funding for this project came to an end in the 2019/20 season. With annual HatTrick FSR funding increasing from €50,000 to €100,000 per member association, it is hoped that the New Israel Fund and the Israel Football Association will continue to work together on this project using HatTrick FSR funding.
Key performance indicators

Objective
Combat, reduce and eventually eliminate racism, incitement, violence and all other forms of discrimination, including sexism and homophobia, at football matches and online

Major racist chants and incidents at Israeli Premier League matches

Conduct an effective campaign combating racism and promoting inclusivity through the involvement of star players

Footballers taking part in activities

Performance Targets
Fans and children taking part in activities

Promote KIO’s values on social media platforms

Planned activities

Concluding remarks

2019/20 was another successful season, with the near eradication of racist chanting at matches in Israel’s top division. KIO volunteer observers found only 13 incidents of racist chanting across the whole of the 2019/20 season, down from 69 in 2017/18. Despite this massive improvement, we hope to further reduce the number of incidents in 2020/21. The girls’ Team of Equals completed their second season and are set to embark on a third season, and the Team for Social Responsibility continue to cement their reputation as an important instrument in promoting KIO Israel’s mission and objectives, as well as playing an important role in maintaining contact with fans during lockdown.”

Good Practice

Maintaining contact with fans during the COVID-19 crisis

Objective
Star players encouraged fans to ‘stay home and stay safe’ during lockdown and conveyed traditional KIO messages combating racism, sexism, homophobia and violence.

The Wow! factor
Members of the Team for Social Responsibility used their celebrity and role model status to maintain contact with fans via a series of posts and clips conveying the importance of observing ministry of health instructions to prevent the spread of the virus and reminding them of the importance of tolerance, inclusiveness and respect for all.

"This is a strange situation, but we must all stay home and stay safe, and if we have to go out, keep our distance from people and wear masks. We are all missing football and even the training, but I keep myself busy at home and try to keep as fit as possible."

International Blind Sports Federation

Mission

The International Blind Sports Federation (IBSA) aims to give every girl, boy, woman and man with a visual impairment the chance to play football at the level they choose, regardless of their age, location and life circumstances.

ibsasport.org/sports/football

Objectives

Ensure that blind and partially sighted people in all European countries have the opportunity to play blind football.

Offer and/or introduce blind football to visually impaired people in all European countries that have not yet had the opportunity to develop the game.

Provide support for countries looking to introduce blind football and emerging countries wishing to develop new programmes (particularly youth and women’s development projects).

Meet the growing demand for blind football equipment (with particular emphasis on grassroots programmes) by supplying equipment free of charge to new and emerging countries and providing free equipment for youth and women’s development projects in all countries.

Expand the pool of qualified referees in Europe and maximise training opportunities for new coaches.

Seven women took part in the camp, making up 19.4% of all participants.

My teammate Arman and I were lucky enough to participate in the international blind football training camp organised by IBSA in Hungary, making it the first time that Armenia had been represented at the event. It was a great honour for me to learn to play blind football and get to know the other players and coaches. I gained a lot of experience, which I am currently using to develop blind football in Armenia. Sport is one of the greatest achievements of my life, giving me the opportunity to achieve my lifelong dream – to play football. I had a wonderful few days in Hungary, making good friends, with whom I am still in touch. I am very grateful to the event’s organisers for all their important work.”

Alla Sahakyan, participant from Armenia

Highlight

The 2019 IBSA Blind Football European Youth Camp, which took place in Budapest, Hungary, from 10 to 14 July, brought together 36 participants from 11 countries for three days of training under the watchful eye of an experienced coach. The camp culminated in friendly matches where the players had the chance to showcase the new skills they had learned.
IBSA chose to hold the camp in Hungary because of the country’s existing blind football programme, working with a local team to deliver the camp. As part of the camp’s legacy, IBSA purchased goalposts and nets for the local team using project funding, upgrading the existing ones at their usual training facility (which did not meet IBSA’s standards for international competitions). In addition, IBSA also purchased equipment for distribution to participants at the end of the camp. Since 2012, IBSA has donated 1,852 balls, 1,815 pairs of eyeshades and 205 blackout masks to 50 countries across Europe. Participants were reached by means of an open call, which made it clear that the camp was open to both young men and young women under the age of 23. One or two exceptions were made for overage local players who were keen to take part, including István Szabó, who featured in the #EqualGame campaign.

Additional achievements

• The IBSA Blind Football Coaching Manual was published at the end of 2019. The purpose of that manual is to empower aspiring blind football coaches and give them the skills they need to gain a better understanding of blind football and deliver a positive coaching experience for all players.

• Significant amounts of blind football equipment was distributed to national and local programmes, with particular emphasis on youth and women’s programmes and schools for blind children.

• IBSA provided support to a development project entitled The Game is Coming in Portugal, which aims to reintroduce blind football in Portugal after an absence of a few years. That project is also supported by the Portuguese Football Federation, which will use HatTrick funding to help it achieve its goals.

• Other IBSA activities were either postponed or cancelled on account of the COVID-19 pandemic, including country-specific training camps in new countries and the IBSA Euro Challenge Cup (a development tournament for teams from new and emerging countries). In addition, it was impossible to distribute equipment from March onwards, as many countries would not accept shipments from Spain, where IBSA’s football operations are based.

Concluding remarks

"Progress in blind football in Europe has been curtailed due to recent events, but certainly not halted, and IBSA has continued its work Europe-wide. Blind football is coming out of this stronger and more determined, and we look forward to working with more and more national associations and other partners to achieve our dream of enabling all visually impaired people in Europe to play football."

Tournament carried over from 2019/20 owing to the COVID-19 pandemic.
The IFCPF provided grants to support the hosting of three regional CP football development camps for female players in the Netherlands, Australia, and Trinidad and Tobago.

The IFCPF has developed a plan for female CP football, focusing on well-targeted investment and capacity building in order to achieve more than parity and help to promote and grow the female version of CP football everywhere, for everyone.

One of the projects that the IFCPF launched as part of its female development strategy was the new Kickstart CP Football (Female) project, which is co-funded by the EU’s Erasmus+ programme. This project aims to look at the question of how female players want to play and interact with the game of football, providing the IFCF with input that can be used to develop and govern the game through a player-centric approach. As a collaborative learning project, partners are tasked with consulting their own target audience, developing activity plans and then delivering participant-focused activities in order to gain insight into the question of how to grow the sport of CP football and female participation. At the end of the project, a resource will be produced for dissemination to the entire CP football family and the whole of the parasport community, giving guidance (including case studies and best practices) on developing sport for female players.

The International Federation of CP Football (IFCPF) aims to harness its position and profile as a leading international sports federation in order to inspire people to achieve their full potential through the sport of CP football.

ifcpf.com

Objectives

Grow participation across all levels and formats of the game.

Establish a competition structure, pathways and greater worldwide representation, while demonstrating clear, robust and accountable processes and policies.

Support the development of all people involved in the delivery of CP football.

Communicate the IFCPF’s message and harness the potential of the organisation’s global reach.

Build, nurture and activate key partnerships.

I like the fact that more women are participating in CP football, because then boys, girls, men and women can all join in. For me, it’s important that CP football grows as a sport.”

Additional achievements

- From 2 to 20 July 2019, 224 male players from 16 countries participated in the 2019 IFCPF World Cup, which was hosted by Sevilla FC at Estadio Jesús Navas.
- In order to mark World Cerebral Palsy Day on 6 October 2019, the IFCPF ran a What’s Your Goal? campaign to show the world what is possible and show how CP football can make a real difference. The IFCPF called on the CP football family to share their goals by posting a video or photo and telling the world: “#MyGoal is …”.
- The IFCPF was given a World CP Day Award in the category ‘Contribution’. That award recognised the IFCPF’s efforts to integrate people with cerebral palsy throughout the organisation’s governance structure, with appropriately experienced and skilled persons with CP on the IFCPF’s board, committees and working groups.
- The IFCPF unveiled a new temporary concussion substitution (TCS) policy, the first of its kind in football. Adopted by the IFCPF for implementation from 1 January 2020, that rule change aims to make the sport safer by giving pitchside clinicians more time to assess and manage concussions.
- Through the IFCPF Education Programme, the organisation aims to bring together key tools with a view to supporting the development of everyone involved in delivering CP football. The IFCPF Education Programme embraces cost-effective ways of working by using technology to connect with all members of the CP football family. As the sport develops, the IFCPF will always seek to support its dedicated team of employees and volunteers who deliver the game, challenging norms and exceeding expectations.

“As a respected partner of UEFA, we are grateful for their support. Our governance is robust, we are giving a platform to inspiring youth ambassadors, we are improving the communication of our message, and we are pleased to be working closely with UEFA to find new ways of promoting CP football. Our female players are now even more enthusiastic following the announcement of our first ever IFCPF Women’s World Cup.”

Objective
The IFCPF seeks to “inspire people to achieve their full potential through the sport of CP football”, adapting activities and tools so that everyone can participate.

The Wow! factor
The IFCPF aims to use creative and innovative methods to ensure that it remains a leading international federation. By bringing its various programmes together under the umbrella of the Education Programme and enhancing its use of Zoom, YouTube, Workplace, etc., the IFCPF has improved its ability to engage with the CP football community and provide support in a cost-effective manner.

Stakeholders and partners
• IFCPF member organisations – These have indicated to the IFCPF that they would benefit from increased training and greater variety in the training provided. The Education Programme is a platform whereby members are responsible for sharing their knowledge and skills with the rest of the CP football family.
• IFCPF volunteers and committees – IFCPF volunteers have played a vital part in bringing together information, knowledge and resources.

As a small international federation, we recognise that we must always be creative and work in innovative ways to ensure we remain a leading international federation. I believe that our new Education Programme brings together the great work we are already doing, creates a platform for new things our team are developing and opens the door for exciting collaboration opportunities. We are only limited by our imagination, and this new programme gives us the scope to turn ideas into tools to support the entire CP football family.”

Mission

Special Olympics provides year-round sports training and athletic competition in a variety of Olympic-type sports for children and adults with learning disabilities.

specialolympics.org/regions/europe-eurasia

Objectives

- Develop grassroots football by increasing the number of people playing the game – both with and without learning disabilities.
- Organise coaching seminars and workshops in different countries with the support of clubs and national associations, ensuring that inclusion and unified football are on the agenda.
- Promote competitive and recreational forms of unified sport for youth and adult players.

Highlight

The Gothia Special Olympics Trophy, a seven-a-side football tournament, was contested in Gothenburg from 14 to 18 July 2019 as part of the annual Gothia Cup, with 30 teams participating. The Gothia Special Olympics Trophy is the result of cooperation between the Gothia Cup, Special Olympics Europe Eurasia (SOEE), Special Olympics Sweden and former Swedish international Kim Källström.

That Special Olympics tournament has become a firm fixture at the Gothia Cup, the world’s largest and most international youth football event, which has played host to over a million youth players from 140 countries since it was first organised in 1975.

In the period since 2011, nearly 2,500 boys and girls from over 50 countries across Europe and beyond – both players with learning disabilities and unified partners without disabilities – have taken part in that tournament in Gothenburg.

Additional achievements

- 13 teams participated in the unified 7in7 Cup five-a-side tournament in Zlin, Czech Republic, from 11 to 13 October 2019.
- In the first half of the 2019/20 season, Shakhtar Social, in cooperation with Special Olympics Ukraine and UNFPA Ukraine, ran weekly football training for girls with learning disabilities in eastern Ukraine as part of the Come On, Play! project.
- Special Olympics Israel players led Israeli Premier League teams into Haifa Municipal Stadium to promote the partnership between Hapoel Haifa FC and Special Olympics, promoting a message of inclusion and sport.
- Eight-a-side football was added to the Special Olympics Rules in June 2020, increasing the number of competitions aligned with the federation’s system.

“...there is no separation between Special Olympics athletes and others; we enjoy the same facilities and opportunities. Special Olympics pitches are in the perfect position for spectators to stop by, support and learn about our organisation, and our athletes have the chance to socialise with teams from around the world. Both our athletes and the other players grow and become more open as a result of the experience.”

Andre Peeters, football adviser, SOEE

The secret of this inclusive concept’s success is the non-elite approach of Special Olympics teams, which results in competitions spanning all ability levels and equal access for teams from different cultures.
Concluding remarks

“Special Olympics focuses on the sustainable development of local programming that benefits everyone in the community. We do that by showcasing the gifts and talents of people with learning disabilities, creating friendships and demonstrating the very best of the human spirit. Special Olympics changes attitudes and behaviours through sport. We see a huge role for cooperation with football federations and clubs with a view to making that happen.”

European Deaf Sport Organisation

Mission
The European Deaf Sport Organisation (EDSO) aims to give deaf players the opportunity to play football and compete with and against other deaf players, thereby helping deaf individuals to develop greater self-esteem, resilience and physical abilities, and fulfil their potential in society.
edso.eu

Objectives
- Encourage young deaf people to play football.
- Increase the number of female deaf players.
- Continue to enhance deaf football and futsal championships.
- Expand the number of deaf referees involved in futsal and football.
- Boost the number of deaf football coaches and improve all coaches’ comprehension of the requirements involved in coaching deaf football, such as learning sign language.

Highlight
The third European Deaf Champions League U21 Futsal tournament took place from 3 to 5 October 2019 in Warsaw, Poland. A total of 237 players and officials participated in the event, and the action was streamed on YouTube so it could be watched by viewers across Europe and around the world. A total of 14 men’s teams representing Sweden, Italy, Spain, England, Belgium, Israel, Germany, Poland and Norway participated in the tournament.

Two representatives of EDSO Football attended the event, which was followed by a meeting with the Deaf Champions League’s executive committee.

A special fair play award was presented to German team Berliner SC Comet, who were not shown any yellow or red cards and committed a total of just 18 fouls in their six matches.

Additional achievements
• From 21 to 25 January 2020, the seventh European Deaf Champions League Futsal event took place in Vigevano, Italy. A total of 443 players and 138 referees took part in the event, which featured tournaments for both men and women, with a total of 37 teams from 21 European countries participating.
• EDSO postponed many activities in the latter part of the 2019/20 season on account of COVID-19, but it remained active, deciding how to go forward in a COVID-secure manner with future events, workshops and other activities.
The 2019/20 season was very disappointing, with the COVID-19 pandemic having an impact on all aspects of our activities. Everything was put on hold, and many events were cancelled. Of course, those young players will be missing playing. The European qualifying fixtures for the 2021 Deaflympics have been postponed until early 2021, and the Deaflympics themselves are now due to take place in December 2021 in Brazil.

Mission
The European Powerchair Football Association (EPFA) aims to enrich lives through powerchair football, providing more players with opportunities to take part in the beautiful game and achieve their full potential.

europeanpfa.com

Objectives
Grow the game by introducing new countries and players to the sport and helping associations to develop.

Build capacity by delivering training for coaches, officials and staff.

Provide competition through elite national and club competitions, as well as youth and development competitions and camps.

Assist new countries with the development of governance arrangements and structures as they establish their associations.

Administer and promote the sport.

Highlight
In August 2019, at Sport Scotland’s national training centre near Glasgow, the EPFA hosted a Next Generation Experience Camp for Under-16s. The event was attended by 16 participants from six member countries: Scotland, England, the Republic of Ireland, Finland, France and Denmark.

As with other youth camps, training and learning took place in the morning, matches were played in the afternoon, and social activities (featuring quizzes, caricaturists, live music and a Playstation competition) were organised in the evenings. As a gesture of goodwill, all participants received welcome bags full of items provided by UEFA.

UEFA ambassador John Collins and Rangers FC midfielder Glen Kamara visited the camp, with both attempting to play powerchair football. The two ambassadors were amazed at the level of control and skill that was needed to perform even the most basic spin kick.

The camp was led by two coaches from France, one of whom coached France at the 2007 FIPFA World Cup. All of the participants gave highly positive feedback at the end of the week.

"The EPFA Next Generation Experience Camp was such an amazing event to be part of; it was so enjoyable both on a powerchair football level and on a personal level. I’ve formed friendships from this experience and created memories that will last a lifetime. To me, this experience was a great reminder that powerchair football is far more than a sport; it is a community of likeminded people – a family."

Thomas Pettigrew, participant from Scotland
Additional achievements

- As part of the Geneva Cup in Switzerland in August 2019, a training course for referees was delivered at UEFA headquarters in Nyon, with 14 referees participating.
- One powerchair football player from Scotland and two from England were sponsored by the EPFA to participate in the 2019/20 Football for All Leadership Programme, which began in Portugal in October 2019.
- The EPFA continued to support referees in Spain, offering mentoring at new La Liga events.
- An international classification course was held in Bonn, Germany, in February 2020.

Concluding remarks

“We never know the challenges that lay around the corner to test our patience and resolve, but when you build up a sport over many years, you become a family, united in your desire to fight, survive and come back stronger than you were before. Sport, and our sport of powerchair football, will always prevail.”

EPFA sponsors participants in Football for All Leadership Programme

The Wow! factor
After completing a week of lectures and other activities in Portugal, programme participants spend nine months implementing their projects, which involves a huge amount of effort. In 2019/20, one participant produced a series of podcasts for powerchair football players, providing useful advice on subjects such as good mental health, exercise and nutrition, and psychology.

Stakeholders and partners
- Football for All Leadership Programme

31
A total of 31 people (from 15 countries across four continents) have taken part in the Football for All Leadership Programme since it was launched in 2018.

The Football for All Leadership Programme has been successful because of the great quality of its participants. Having three powerchair football players each year has enhanced that success, providing great contributors to the group dynamic with great project ideas and implementation.”

At present, there are around 135 children under the age of 16 who are playing amputee football in Europe.

Objectives

- Increase the number of players, leagues and clubs involved in amputee football in Europe.
- Increase the number of children playing amputee football across Europe.
- Generate interest in the discipline, both across Europe as a whole and in individual countries.
- Increase the number of member associations.
- Establish and develop relationships between mainstream football associations, clubs, players, etc. and amputee football.

Mission

The European Amputee Football Federation (EAAF) seeks to include and support people with amputations or limb defects, increase their access to amputee football opportunities, and use football to improve their quality of life.

amputeefootball.eu

Highlight

In July 2019, an EAAF Junior Camp was held in Germany in cooperation with TSG 1899 Hoffenheim for children between the ages of 7 and 16. Participants from 12 different countries came together to train and play matches at Hoffenheim’s training ground, and participating coaches and parents had the opportunity to integrate, strengthen relationships and exchange experiences.

The most gratifying element was the presence, for the first time, of children and coaches from another continent, with participants from El Salvador and Costa Rica demonstrating the growing reach of amputee football around the world.

The EAAF’s annual youth camps have directly influenced decision-making at national level, with national youth programmes being established in countries such as Poland, England, Scotland, Italy and, most recently, Georgia. Those local projects will give children with amputations and limb defects opportunities to play amputee football on a regular basis.

Additional achievements

- The fifth EAAF Congress, which was held in Poland in February 2020, was attended by representatives of 16 countries, with the Israel Amputee Football Association welcomed as the EAAF’s 17th member federation. The draw for the 2020 EAAF Amputee Football Champions League and the official draw for the 2020 European Amputee Football Championship in Kraków were key parts of that event.
- The EAAF launched a new website, which is intended to act as a promotional platform for the discipline in Europe. It explains the rules of the game and the player classification system, as well as highlighting the most important events in European amputee football. It also gives potential players direct contact details for representatives of all national associations.
- Because of the COVID-19 pandemic, the EAAF encouraged players to stay physically active but train at home. The federation organised an online training session for elite amputee football players from 13 countries, followed by a Q&A session with UEFA ambassador Robert Pires.
- Cooperation with the International Committee of the Red Cross and the Palestinian Amputee Football Association led to the establishment of a youth programme for boys and girls in Gaza. The EAFP plans to invite young players from Palestine to come to Europe for the fifth EAAF Junior Camp in July 2021.

Natasha Duignan, Republic of Ireland coach

"It is brilliant to see some girls here. Hopefully, in another few years we will see these girls developing and maybe even getting the opportunity to make it as far as the World Cup."

Planned activities

- June 2021: Sixth EAFF Congress will be held on 27-28 February 2021, online.
- March 2021: EAFF Champions League is planned for 20-24 May 2021 in Gaziantep, Turkey.
- September 2020: EAFF Champions League (postponed to 12-19 September 2021).

Concluding remarks

“Thanks to UEFA’s support, amputee football continues to grow year on year. This season was special for many reasons. We succeeded in taking our junior amputee football programme beyond Europe, reaching children from Costa Rica and El Salvador. And the official draw for the European Amputee Football Championship generated a considerable amount of publicity in the media. It was also special because of the COVID-19 pandemic that disrupted the second part of the season, with the amputee football community approaching that challenge with its unique combination of tenacity, engagement and passion. Amputee football players not only met at online training sessions, but organised charitable activities supporting their teammates and local communities. I am proud of what amputee football has become today.”

Good Practice

EAFF Junior Camp

Objective
To organise a professional international summer camp for young amputee footballers, with well-planned workshop modules for youth football coaches, thus inspiring them to create opportunities for children to play amputee football on a regular basis in all EAFF member countries, as well as other countries around the world.

The Wow! factor
In 2019, for the first time in the camp’s history, the EAFF welcomed children and coaches from two non-European countries: El Salvador and Costa Rica. Camp participants trained in four international groups based on age, which were led by international coaching teams. A wide-ranging exchange of ideas and experiences between the amputee football coaches strengthened their competencies, contributing to the further development of the young players in their charge.

Mission

The Homeless World Cup Foundation (HWCF) uses football to inspire homeless people to change their lives, and to change perceptions and attitudes towards people who are experiencing homelessness.

homelessworldcup.org

Objectives

- Enable street football partners to engage with homeless people around the world.
- Improve cooperation and learning among street football partners.
- Support opportunities for formerly homeless players to progress.
- Provide opportunities for people experiencing homelessness to take part in street football.
- Raise awareness of homelessness and change public perceptions.

Highlight

The 17th Homeless World Cup took place in Cardiff’s Bute Park from 27 July to 3 August 2019.

500

More than 500 players representing 46 countries travelled to Cardiff to attend the week-long football festival. These teams represented the 90,000 players who participated in programmes delivered by the Homeless World Cup Foundation’s street football partners in 2019.

There was considerable broadcast and digital coverage, with more than 6.4 million views across all online platforms, as well as significant coverage in national and international media.

The organisers worked closely with local organisations to maximise the event’s reach and impact. The Wallich, a local homelessness charity, placed its welfare vehicle on site, providing support to rough sleepers, people who were in temporary accommodation or vulnerably housed, and players and volunteers participating in the tournament.

At a tournament like this, we’re treated with respect, with dignity – like human beings. So, when you have this as a life experience, it gives you hope to go on and it feels like you’re sharing the journey with others who are walking towards the same thing: a better future.”

Rona Jarlsdottir, goalkeeper for Team Norway

SDGs 3.4, 4.7, 5.1, 10.2

64  Including new employment, education and housing opportunities.

65  Figures taken from the 2019 Street Football Partners Annual Survey (January to December 2019).
The event also included a spoken word programme, which featured guest speakers and panel discussions, providing a platform to discuss issues relating to homelessness and social justice, further engaging the public and challenging preconceptions.

A small but important step was the establishment of drinking fountains in accredited and public spaces to minimise recourse to single-use plastics during the week.

The legacy of the 2019 Homeless World Cup will be overseen by the community interest company 2IC 4 C.I.C., which was established by actor Michael Sheen. The legacy working group contributed to the Welsh government report and action plan ‘What Ending Homelessness in Wales Looks Like’.

Main achievements

The Homeless World Cup Foundation delivered two refereeing courses in Cardiff, Wales, and San José, Costa Rica, in July and December 2019, in cooperation with the KNVB, Street Football Wales and the Asociación Escuchando Gente Sin Hogar. These courses provided personal development opportunities for participants, helping them to improve soft skills and develop leadership qualities. They also gave marginalised participants the opportunity to officiate at an international event.

The official Homeless World Cup Podcast was launched in September 2019, with the aim of discussing the unifying power of sport, and looking at what goes into making the Homeless World Cup tournament happen.

Voluntary regional advisers were recruited for Africa (December 2019) and Asia (January 2020) to help expand the HWCF network by recruiting partners in new territories and to support the development of existing street football partners. This initiative seeks to further increase impact and opportunities on the ground, and to challenge negative stereotypes and social exclusion.

An online forum and resource pool for homeless people around the world teams applying for the annual tournament were participating in continual events.

Changing perceptions around homelessness is key to creating more inclusive societies. With UEFA’s support, and through our annual tournament and global network of street football partners, the Homeless World Cup Foundation demonstrates how football can be used to help people change their own lives and to address negative stereotypes.”

Good Practice

International Partners Sharing Skills (IPASS)

Objective
To establish an effective online communication tool for the 70 street football partners, allowing them to work together and learn from one another.

The Wow! factor
For the first time in the history of the Homeless World Cup Foundation’s communications with its network of street football partners, a ‘members only’ area of the website was created. Those partners now get exclusive access to resources that can help programmes to increase their capacity. They can also share their own examples of good practices. Resources are accepted in any language in order to maximise sharing, but for key documents, the aim is to provide them in at least French, Spanish or English.

Stakeholders and partners

- Coaches Across Continents
- Healthy Stadia

The portal addresses communication gaps between partners that have not been fully addressed until now. It is a space that allows, for example, a partner in Kyrgyzstan to learn about a useful safeguarding tool being used in Grenada and find out how to replicate it.”

Centre for Access to Football in Europe

Mission
The Centre for Access to Football in Europe (CAFE) works to make the game accessible, inclusive and welcoming for all disabled people, whether as fans, players, coaches, officials, administrators, decision-makers or leaders, under the slogan ‘Total Football, Total Access’.

www.cafefootball.eu

Objectives

- Improve access for disabled fans at European stadiums and make matchdays more inclusive.
- Increase the number of disabled fans attending matches.
- Raise awareness of the issue of access and inclusion across the UEFA region.
- Give disabled people the opportunity to take their rightful place as employees and decision-makers within football.

Highlight
In February 2020, CAFE launched #MyMatchday, a series of interviews with disabled fans from across Europe.

130 million
There are over 130 million disabled people living in UEFA’s 55 member countries, yet around half of those disabled people have never attended a live public or sporting event.

#MyMatchday showcases the positive news that sometimes goes unreported, sharing real-life experiences with other disabled fans who may never have attended a live match. Disabled fans are, first and foremost, fans, and the interviews look at how they first fell in love with football, their favourite memories from attending live matches and their typical matchday routines. The interviews also explore any feelings, doubts or concerns that those fans may have had before attending a live match for the first time and ask the fans what their message would be to those who have not yet experienced live football.

The monthly interviews have helped to shine a light on disabled supporters and their experiences with live football. They deliver powerful messages and encourage more disabled fans to attend future matches. A variety of topics are discussed in the interviews, including adjusting to becoming disabled later in life and the effects of online trolling and disability abuse.

I would hate to think that people like [my daughter] stayed away from live football because of fears about the stadium or how other fans would react to them. There is nothing like being there – I would encourage everyone to go and support your team and see your heroes.”

Additional achievements

An expert working group was established to increase CAFE’s understanding of non-visible disabilities and conditions. Non-visible disabled fans were surveyed to learn how best to meet their access requirements. They were asked about the barriers they face at matches and their experiences with existing accessible services.

A small grants programme was launched in connection with the CAFE Week of Action helping disabled fans and disabled supporters associations to take part in the annual celebration of access and inclusion. Grants of up to €250 were made available to assist disabled fans with the funding of their planned activities.

An animated video was produced in cooperation with UEFA to mark the CAFE Week of Action 2020, celebrating ten years of cooperation between CAFE and UEFA. The video reflects on several key achievements and shared goals in connection with the CAFE Week of Action, with a focus on improving the accessibility of stadiums more inclusive for disabled fans attending matches.

CAFE ran a training session on the UEFA National Associations Stadium Infrastructure Workshop in Nyon, increasing understanding of accessible stadiums in order to support UEFA stadium inspectors in their roles. That training led to further cooperation with the German Football Association and doctors, assessing the accessibility of the Olympiastadion in Berlin in order to ensure an accessible and inclusive experience at the German Cup final.

An information guide was published for and distributed to national associations planning to apply for UEFA FSR HatTrick funding for projects relating to improved access and inclusion. CAFE supports applications on this topic, and the information guide includes a comprehensive list of supported projects and activities.

*As the number of disability access officer (DAO) meetings was higher than originally planned, CAFE made approximately 50% more meetings to exceed its target in this area.

This figure is dependent on the updated Access for All guidance being published as planned.

This will be dependent on the COVID-19 situation. This figure includes UEFA Women’s EURO 2021 venues (excluding temporary stadium).

Two venues in Porto, Portugal (2019 UEFA Nations League final) and in Málaga, Spain (2018 UEFA Champions League final). In addition, nine venues in the postponed EURO 2020 (which will continue in 2021/22) in preparation for the postponed EURO 2020.

The majority of these workshops related to the stadiums of clubs participating in the UEFA Champions League.

As a means of moving forward with this KPI and employing new tactics, CAFE held discussions with 16 disability NGOs in areas where disabled fans are most often found.

Good Practice
Hosting the first tri-national networking meeting for disability access officers (DAOs)

Objective
To help DAOs from England, Germany and Russia to share ideas, good practices and solutions to problems, and to promote discussions within the DAO network on the subject of overcoming attitudinal barriers faced by disabled people and improving the management of relationships with disabled fans.

The Wow! factor
CAFE has facilitated a number of DAO exchange meetings between opposing sides in UEFA Champions League and UEFA Europa League matches. This, however, was the first time that DAOs from a large number of clubs had the opportunity to come together to share their own experiences and offer suggestions to their counterparts on how to implement accessible and inclusive solutions at their clubs.

Link to good practice
First tri-national DAO exchange meeting held in Manchester

CAFE has delivered more than 30 DAO training sessions to over 600 participants since 2017 and has facilitated 15 DAO exchange meetings. It is critically important that DAOs continue to have the opportunity to network and share best practice solutions in order to improve access and inclusion at both national and international level.

Although we all share the same passion for the game, there can be vast differences between the experiences of disabled fans in different countries. We look forward to hosting more of these exchange meetings and helping DAOs across Europe to share innovative solutions and best practice examples from their own experiences.

Colour Blind Awareness

Mission
Colour Blind Awareness aims to highlight issues affecting colour blind people (including fans, players and club/association employees) and achieve equal access for every colour blind person, no matter how they engage with football.

colourblindawareness.org

Objectives

- Raise awareness of the accessibility and inclusion problems faced by people with colour blindness throughout the UEFA region.

- Minimise the number of matches made inaccessible by ‘colour blind kit clashes’ at all levels of the game.

- Increase training for coaches to ensure that colour blind players can distinguish between kits and other equipment at all levels of the game.

- Increase awareness among stadium operators of the implications that colour blindness has for stadium operations from a safety, security and service perspective.

- Raise awareness of the issues faced by colour blind spectators, such as colour blind kit clashes, problems when purchasing tickets, and difficulty identifying information (wayfinding, club websites, etc.).

- Create free resources for use by national associations, clubs, leagues and other stakeholders (such as schools).

- Research the prevalence of colour blindness in football players at all levels of the game, identifying potential barriers to progression and looking at how barriers can be overcome.

- Raise awareness of the issues faced by colour blind spectators, such as colour blind kit clashes, problems when purchasing tickets, and difficulty identifying information (wayfinding, club websites, etc.).

- The Erasmus+ grant, which totals €400,000, will enable research and support activities to be conducted in each of the various partner countries. The project began in January 2020, with the first project meeting taking place in Oxford, England.

"We are relatively new to the programme, so we are delighted to be involved, sharing good practices and great ideas. It is so important to work together and amplify each other's messages, as we are all facing the same challenges. This is one of those projects where it really feels like a football family."

Ómar Smárason, head of communications, Football Association of Iceland

© Colour Blind Awareness
Additional achievements

- In association with UEFA FSR partners SD Europe and CAF, training workshops for SLOs and DAOs were delivered to representatives of several national associations and European clubs.
- Colour Blind Awareness was granted official observer status on the Standing Committee of the European Convention on Spectator Violence, enabling it to contribute to the Convention’s appendices.
- Colour Blind Awareness began working, in cooperation with other FSR partners, on the creation of guidance documents for football on subjects such as ticketing and signage (such as those needed by SLOs and DAOs).
- At national events organised by the Football Supporters’ Association and Level Playing Field in the United Kingdom, Colour Blind Awareness hosted activities highlighting the issues faced by colour blind people in football. Many new contacts from clubs and leagues took part in these activities.
- Expanding on the English FA’s initial UEFA FSR HatTrick-funded project, Colour Blind Awareness increased its reach within the national association, delivering training workshops to ensure that the output of core departments (videos, training documents for coaches, etc.) was accessible to colour blind people.

Concluding remarks

The continued support of UEFA enables us to extend the reach of our awareness programme not only within national associations, but also beyond, to influential organisations including the European Commission and international governing bodies of other sports, providing excellent opportunities to bring our inclusivity message to a wider audience.

104 This was higher than the target figure for 2019/20, thanks to an increase in follow-up measures when sharing information, as well as contacts made through stadium audits and conferences (which were also followed up on). 105 Much of the coverage gained this season was from club social media accounts where the metrics cannot be assessed. Therefore, this figure represents an estimate of total media views for the social media accounts of Colour Blind Awareness and certain project partners (such as the English FA). Going forward Colour Blind Awareness will be able to collect impressions from all of its partners, hence the reason for higher targets in coming seasons.

Objective
To harness the power of football in order to raise awareness of issues faced by colour blind children in sport and within mainstream education via the training of football coaches, enabling those coaches to take their knowledge into primary schools.

The Wow! Factor
Using a grant received from the UEFA Foundation for Children, Colour Blind Awareness worked with the English FA and Premier League Communities to create a suite of resources for coaches in the national association’s physical education unit to deliver to Premier League club foundations/community trust coaching staff. In addition, train-the-trainer sessions were created to enable the physical education unit to deliver training to 8,000 coaches within the Premier League Communities grassroots coaching system for primary school children.

Stakeholders and partners
• UEFA Foundation for Children
• English FA’s physical education unit
• Premier League Communities
• Aston Villa Foundation

Before the training, I thought I was properly supporting the colour blind player in my team, but the training allowed me to understand how much more I could have got from her if I’d approached sessions differently using the knowledge I’ve now gained.”

Corinne Mitchell, workforce development officer, Aston Villa Foundation

The implementation of the training element of the project is still ongoing as a result of the impact of COVID-19, but by the time the project is completed, 8,000 coaches within the Premier League Communities coaching system will have been reached.

Environment
WWF

Mission
The World Wide Fund for Nature (WWF) seeks to stop the degradation of our planet’s natural environment and build a future in which people live in harmony with nature. panda.org

Objectives
Secure more ambitious climate commitments from governments at national and global level with a view to achieving the objectives of the Paris Agreement.

Strengthen the role played by non-state actors (cities, companies, financial institutions, etc.) in leading climate action with a view to meeting the targets set by the Paris Agreement.

Maximise the impact of the Paris Agreement by aligning climate targets with other global agreements, including the UN’s Sustainable Development Goals.

We need economic recovery packages that are sustainable and provide a platform for the systemic change which is necessary to advance climate action. Countries must reboot their economies by stepping up their climate action, accelerating the transition to renewables, funding sustainable industries and infrastructure, creating green jobs and greening supply chains.”

Manuel Pulgar-Vidal, leader, WWF International Climate and Energy Practice

Highlight
Keeping climate action at the heart of COVID-19 recovery packages

Between the unprecedented bushfires in Australia and the COVID-19 pandemic, the first six months of 2020 really exposed society’s fragility in the face of global natural forces. Those two crises affected everyone (including the sporting industry, with air pollution from the wildfires affecting tennis players at the Australian Open, for example) and crippled our societies. Although our economies are struggling, now – more than ever – is not the time to cut back on climate action; rather, we should be strengthening it. The WWF is keen to ensure that governments’ recovery packages include measures that support, rather than hinder, greater climate action. Green recovery packages not only have great potential to reignite economies in a quick, powerful and long-lasting manner; they are also essential in order to address the root causes of such crises.

The sporting industry also has a critical role to play in creating a more sustainable world. It can – and must – strive to minimise the environmental impact of its events, leverage its public reach by supporting awareness-raising campaigns and lead by example in the operation of its institutions.

Additional achievements

- The WWF actively participated in key international climate conferences, pressing governments and non-state actors for greater climate ambition and more rapid climate action. At the UN Climate Action Summit in September 2019, the WWF used its influence to stress the role of non-state actors (including sport) in increasing climate ambition, for example by making young people’s voices heard at the summit.
- The WWF produced a video – using UEFA funding – that encouraged citizens to participate in the numerous climate marches which took place worldwide around the time of the UN General Assembly.

At the UN Climate Change Conference (COP25) in Madrid in December 2019 (where UEFA funds contributed to the cost of operating a pavilion for the full duration of the event), the WWF (in addition to relentlessly backing governments for a strong outcome to the climate negotiations) organised 44 public events over the two weeks. In addition, UEFA funding was also used to promote the WWF’s Science-Based Targets initiative to companies at both COP25 and the UN General Assembly.

The sporting industry is also mobilising around climate action. Sport in a Game suggested COP25 by posting climate action messages on stadium advertising boards and co-branding with the COP25 logo.

People in 190 countries and territories around the world – including public figures such as Greta Thunberg, Justin Trudeau and Yusuf Islam (formerly known as Cat Stevens), as well as major organisations such as UEFA – took part in Earth Hour on 28 March 2020. As a result of COVID-19, the 2020 Earth Hour was a virtual event – a chance to speak up for nature and a better and healthier future for everyone.

Concluding remarks

Sport brings the world together. It relies on common rules and cooperation, making it a powerful metaphor for the global effort needed to tackle the climate crisis. The sporting industry has an opportunity to champion climate action by raising awareness and reducing the carbon footprint of its events and operations.

Vanessa Pérez-Cirera, deputy leader, WWF International Climate and Energy Practice
Good Practice

Virtual meetings: the new normal for an international team

Objective
Reduce the carbon footprint of WWF teams working in different countries, while maintaining high-quality human interaction and keeping meetings dynamic and productive.

The Wow! factor
Holding productive remote meetings means using the full range of online meeting tools: virtual breakout groups, real-time collaborative editing of documents, online whiteboards for brainstorming, and creative (and fun!) icebreakers, as well as best-in-class facilitation. With these tools, meeting participants are able to feel connected and hold interactive and productive discussions, despite the virtual set-up. Meetings held remotely help to reduce the need for expensive and environmentally harmful travel.

Stakeholders and partners
• WWF teams around the world, who would otherwise have travelled long distances at a significant cost for internal workshops.
• External experts providing input for WWF workshops (representatives of city authorities, other civil society organisations, companies, etc.). Had these events not been held remotely, the experts in question would have been unlikely to participate (too much travel for too little input, etc.).
• High-level speakers from major institutions, national governments, etc. who attended public events (e.g. high-level WWF/OECD dialogues).

Despite this year’s Annual Conference being virtual, we were honestly surprised by how connected we all felt and how interactive and productive the discussion was.”
Marco Lambertini, director general, WWF International South Pole

Objectives

- Raise environmental awareness by tracking the greenhouse gas emissions generated by UEFA employees and referees.
- Accelerate emission reductions by helping UEFA to invest in high-quality carbon credits to compensate for the emissions it generates through air travel.
- Contribute to the organisation of carbon-neutral competitions and tournaments.

Highlight

For the 2019/20 season, South Pole measured all flight-related greenhouse gas emissions generated by UEFA employees and referees. These totaled 27,620 tonnes of carbon dioxide equivalent (CO₂e), which UEFA offset by continuing to support the Dora-II geothermal power project in Turkey.

Additionally, UEFA also decided in 2019/20 to offset the greenhouse gas emissions of all the spectators who are expected to travel to EURO 2020 matches – an estimated 425,000 tonnes of greenhouse gas emissions. This is the first time that all emissions generated by fans travelling to a major international sporting event have been offset.

This brings the total amount of emissions offset by UEFA in the course of its decade-long partnership with South Pole to a remarkable 666,963 tonnes of CO₂e.

UEFA purchased carbon credits from a number of carbon compensation projects, including two projects in Rwanda that are distributing efficient cookstoves and improving access to clean water by repairing boreholes in rural areas. All of the projects that are supported by UEFA have been certified by Gold Standard, an internationally recognised organisation that acts as a benchmark for meaningful climate action and sustainable development.

“UEFA demonstrated remarkable commitment to climate action in deciding to compensate for emissions generated by fans travelling to EURO 2020, even though the tournament had been moved to summer 2021 owing to the COVID-19 pandemic. UEFA supported Gold Standard renewable energy projects, as well as projects that empower rural African communities through access to clean water and efficient cookstoves.”

Natalia Gorina, commercial director, South Pole

Mission

South Pole seeks to accelerate the transition to a sustainable and climate-smart economy and society.

What is carbon compensation?

Carbon compensation is an internationally recognised way of taking responsibility for unavoidable carbon emissions. It involves offsetting the greenhouse gas emissions that are generated by an individual or an organisation (i.e. their carbon footprint) by preventing the same amount of emissions from entering the atmosphere elsewhere on Earth. As climate change is a global problem, it does not matter where exactly on Earth an emission reduction occurs.

What are carbon credits?

A carbon credit is a certificate that corresponds to the reduction or avoidance of the equivalent of 1 tonne of CO₂. By purchasing carbon credits, an organisation can support the development of projects in areas such as renewable energy, energy efficiency and forestry, as well as projects that support local communities.

118 For example, a person flying from Geneva to Rome in business class emits the equivalent of 0.286 tonnes of CO₂, so roughly one-third of a carbon credit is needed to compensate for their carbon footprint. The calculation takes account of the impact that aviation has on the climate at high altitude.

119 The use of ‘tonnes of carbon dioxide equivalent’ as a unit of measurement involves converting amounts of other greenhouse gases to the equivalent amount of carbon dioxide with the same global warming potential. This allows the impact of other greenhouse gases (such as methane and nitrous oxide) to be quantified.

120 The use of ‘tonnes of carbon dioxide equivalent’ as a unit of measurement involves converting amounts of other greenhouse gases to the equivalent amount of carbon dioxide with the same global warming potential. This allows the impact of other greenhouse gases (such as methane and nitrous oxide) to be quantified.
Additional achievements

- With UEFA's support, the Rwandan borehole project is preventing an average of 125,000 tonnes of CO₂ being released into the atmosphere each year by removing the need to boil water on wood fires for purification. Thanks to the repaired boreholes, 68,000 people now have easy access to clean water, removing a significant barrier to sustainable development. By reducing the need to boil water, the borehole project also saves 83,000 tonnes of wood each year, easing pressure on surrounding forests.

- As a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, flight-related greenhouse gas emissions generated by UEFA employees and referees fell by 84% in the period from March to June 2020 relative to the same period in 2019. Even after COVID-19, the number of flights taken is expected to fall in the long term as a result of increased use of video-conferencing technology within the organisation.

- South Pole raised awareness among UEFA’s FSR partners and member associations on the subject of tackling greenhouse gas emissions and organising carbon-neutral events through presentations at the UEFA FSR Workshop (June 2019) and the UEFA FSR Compact Course (September 2019) and outreach to national associations through the UEFA FSR LinkedIn group. In addition, CAFE also decided to measure and offset the greenhouse gas emissions generated by the third International CAFE Conference. With UEFA’s support, South Pole also measured and offset the footprint of the 2019 Sporting Chance Forum organised by the Centre for Sport and Human Rights.

121 On average, the efficient cookstove project prevents over 58,000 tonnes of CO₂ each year by reducing fuel consumption when cooking.

122 In the period from March to June 2019, greenhouse gas emissions totalled 10,176 tonnes of CO₂. The equivalent figure for the period from March to June 2020 was just 1,619 tonnes.

123 Each carbon credit represents a Gold Standard-certified emission reduction totalling 1 tonne of CO₂.

124 Each carbon credit represents a Gold Standard-certified emission reduction totalling 1 tonne of CO₂.

125 The emissions have been calculated and the credits retired, but EURO 2020 has been postponed to 2021.

UEFA’s bold and increasingly ambitious commitment to sustainability is raising the bar for all other major sporting organisations worldwide. By investing in climate action projects to compensate for unavoidable greenhouse gas emissions, UEFA is driving down global emissions, while also contributing to the UN’s Sustainable Development Goals, which seek to ensure a just transition to a low-carbon future. We hope that other major sporting organisations follow UEFA’s example, seeing the importance and urgency of taking responsibility for the environmental impact of large-scale events.”

- Calculate greenhouse gas footprint of UEFA’s flights on a monthly basis
- Select an appropriate Gold Standard carbon offsetting project for UEFA for 2020/21
- Provide a framework for climate action by national football associations
- Contribute to the organisation of carbon-neutral competitions, with a focus on the engagement of fans at EURO 2020 and the planning of Women’s EURO 2021 in England.
Good Practice
Climate action today in preparation for EURO 2020

Objective
EURO 2020 will span 12 different countries, with large amounts of fan travel (and, therefore, greenhouse gas emissions) expected. The objective is to compensate for such emissions by financing much-needed climate action and sustainable development, supporting the global transition to a zero-carbon future – all while taking the steps that are needed to cut emissions internally within UEFA wherever possible.

The Wow! factor
UEFA demonstrated leadership and commitment by offsetting fan travel at EURO 2020 in 2019/20, despite the tournament having been postponed to 2021 as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic.

The type of impacts UEFA is helping to create, include:
• agricultural extension services to ensure more efficient farming practices and alternative sources of income;
• jobs for rangers, who can protect forests from illegal logging and poaching;
• helping rural communities build and maintain schools and clinics;
• ensuring rural communities are provided with basic necessities, such as safe drinking water.

Stakeholders and partners
UEFA worked with South Pole (a project developer and global climate solutions company) to ensure that all carbon-offsetting projects had a lasting and permanent impact. All projects selected were approved by Gold Standard, an internationally recognised third-party verification organisation, to ensure that they met the highest standards in terms of their environmental and social impact.

Science and common sense tell us we need deep and fast decarbonisation to prevent further warming of our planet. We must dramatically ramp up our ambition and act collectively today to create a future where people and the planet are prioritised.”

Michael Weber, director of corporate climate neutrality, South Pole

Global emissions need to be reduced now. A number of committed businesses and organisations are leading the way in this regard, voluntarily implementing climate action today in order to drive a rapid and far-reaching transition to a low-carbon world and ensure that the post COVID-19 recovery is green.

Health and well-being European Healthy Stadia Network

Mission

The European Healthy Stadia Network (Healthy Stadia) works with clubs, stadium operators and governing bodies to ensure that sports venues are ‘health-promoting settings’, using practices that support healthier matchday environments and promote healthier lifestyles through football. healthystadia.eu

Objectives

Promote tobacco-free stadium environments in UEFA competitions and across the European football community as a whole.

Provide stadium assessments and recommendations for the finals of all UEFA club and national team competitions.

Celebrate World Heart Day with the European football community, especially UEFA’s member associations.

Promote physically active modes of transport to and from football venues and physically active lifestyles for fans through the EuroFIT programme.

Promote mental health and resilience training for community and grassroots coaches on adverse childhood experiences (ACEs) and trauma-informed sports participation.

Promote healthier stadium catering options by means of a healthy catering benchmarking tool and new guidance for venue and tournament catering units.

Highlight

Healthy Stadia developed a new pioneering training programme for community and grassroots sports coaches, giving them a better understanding of ACEs and the ability to adopt a trauma-informed approach to their coaching roles.

There is now a robust evidence base demonstrating that young people who have significant experience of trauma and ACEs are more likely to adopt health-harming behaviours in later life, such as a poor diet, smoking, and alcohol and drug misuse, contributing to much higher incidence of chronic health problems such as obesity, type 2 diabetes, and cardiovascular and respiratory diseases.

Healthy Stadia initially devised the course as a face-to-face training initiative for coaches at the 2019 Homeless World Cup, before developing it further and turning it into an online training course.

The training was a great insight into ACEs, and it was brilliantly delivered. Our existing delivery focuses on mental health awareness, working with children and young people who are at risk of poor mental health. This training provides an understanding of how certain risk factors/ACEs can affect a young person.”

Jack Mullineux, Tackling the Blues mental health coordinator, Everton in the Community

Healthy Stadia worked with experts in the field to develop a two-hour training course for people delivering football on the front line at grassroots and academy level, equipping them with early-intervention skills to ensure that football settings are seen as safe and inclusive environments by all participants. Not only does this angender positive health and well-being outcomes and greater levels of resilience, it also promotes higher levels of inclusivity and participation in grassroots football.

Healthy Stadia initially devised the course as a face-to-face training initiative for coaches at the 2019 Homeless World Cup, before developing it further and turning it into an online training course.
Additional achievements

• Healthy Stadia assessments relating to health risks (tobacco, physical inactivity, alcohol consumption and poor diet) led to the production of four reports, training modules and recommendations for healthier UEFA club competition finals (Champions League, Women's Champions League, Europa League and Super Cup).\(^\text{126}\)

• Healthy Stadia developed an online resource portal containing guidance and media assets to help promote World Heart Day 2019 through digital and social media. A total of 32 UEFA member associations participated in the campaign, which produced over 16,000 social media interactions and 160,000 video views.

• In April 2020, in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, Healthy Stadia worked with its in-house public health nutritionists to develop a range of guidance materials supporting frontline delivery partners, with a focus on food security, diet and nutrition. Guidance documents in Healthy Stadia’s COVID-19 resource hub have been downloaded over 650 times, including summary advice on vitamin D supplementation, guidance on how to assemble a healthy, balanced food parcel, and meal ideas using both non-perishable and fresh food items.

• A Tobacco-Free Stadia Declaration Support Pack was published in May 2020, supplementing previous guidance developed by Healthy Stadia, in order to help individual clubs, leagues and governing bodies to develop robust tobacco control policies at their stadiums. The declaration’s first signatories are due to be announced in September 2020, with agencies in Belgium working with Healthy Stadia to achieve this through new guidance.

\(^{128}\) Organisations involved in the delivery of football activities at all levels of the football pyramid.
More than at any other time since UEFA was founded in 1954, has the theme of good health and well-being held such a fundamental position in the lives of people across Europe and beyond. Although the COVID-19 virus is classified as an infectious disease, there is now a substantial evidence base linking non-communicable diseases (NCDs) – including obesity, cardiovascular diseases, type 2 diabetes and respiratory diseases – with far poorer outcomes for those with COVID-19. It is therefore incumbent upon governments and governing bodies, such as UEFA, to further strengthen policies and interventions that can assist in preventing NCDs as part of the process of ‘building back better’. Healthy Stadia looks forward to being part of this process over the next season and will continue its work on tobacco-free environments and the promotion of physically active lifestyles through football, whilst further developing its newly established programme on trauma-informed practice within sport.”

Objective
To provide training online via Zoom, allowing delivery to continue throughout the COVID-19 lockdown period, reaching a wider audience.

The Wow! factor
Healthy Stadia reconfigured a face-to-face training programme for online delivery via Zoom, using a lead trainer for delivery and utilising tools such as quizzes, polls, Q&As, video and online evaluation.

Stakeholders and partners
• The training course was developed in cooperation with an expert on trauma-informed practice.

Cross Cultures

Cross Cultures uses its Open Fun Football Schools (OFFS) as an entry point into local communities in conflict-sensitive areas with the aim of promoting a culture of peace and non-violence, gender equality, social inclusion, cultural diversity and sustainable development.

ccpa.eu

Objectives

Establish relationships between people by bridging ethnic, social, political and religious divides, fostering tolerance and creating common ground, preventing differences from acting as barriers to the promotion of peace, non-violence, cohesion and cooperation.

Support girls’ and women’s active participation in grassroots football in order to promote gender equality, combat gender stereotypes and foster women’s well-being.

Involves local football clubs, civil society organisations, schools, community police, parents and local authorities in cross-sectoral networks with a view to developing and implementing education and awareness campaigns, with a focus on child protection.

Highlight

The protection of children in sport was again the main focus of the OFFS programme in 2019/20, with Cross Cultures’ special cross-sectoral approach achieving particularly good results in Ukraine and Moldova.

Cross Cultures’ safeguarding concept spans everything from positive environments for children to areas of neglect and abuse. It adopts a cross-sectoral approach, whereby key stakeholders such as football clubs, schools, parents, local authorities and community police work together to prevent abuse and neglect. This is done by mobilising and training relevant stakeholders with the following objectives:

• Openly address safeguarding issues, recognising each actor’s role and capacity,
• Respond by doing no harm and ensuring that preventive measures are put in place,
• Refer, report and take appropriate action in the event of concerns.

In addition, child safeguarding was integrated into the regular OFFS coaching seminar curriculum, resulting in the development of a code of conduct for each club or local community participating in the OFFS programme. These codes of conduct consist of eight clear measures, helping to ensure the protection and general well-being of children across entire communities – both within the OFFS programme and within other programmes implemented by coaches.

Additional achievements

- All in all, 143 OFFSs and 367 Fun Football Festivals were organised in 11 UEFA countries, reaching a total of 77,406 boys and girls between the ages of 6 and 12. Those activities were organised in accordance with the core OFFS principles, with the aim of uniting people and local communities affected by ethnic and/or social conflict, thereby contributing to peaceful co-existence, reconciliation and social inclusion. The Football Federation of Ukraine performed particularly well in this regard, hosting 43 OFFSs (attended by 7,824 children) and 252 Fun Football Festivals (attended by 41,614 children).
- With 42% of all participants being girls, the OFFS programme continued to focus strongly on helping girls’ football to grow.
- A total of 1,188 voluntary leaders and coaches were given training on Cross Cultures’ special child-centric and community-based fun football approach at a three-day coaching seminar, earning a coaching diploma specific to that level.
- Regional cooperation between grassroots coaches in the western Balkans focused on empowering young men and women to become agents for change in the local community, seeking to use community football as way of contributing to the overall well-being of children and young people.

Concluding remarks

"Fun games are an important part of children's cognitive, social and cultural development. However, at the moment, children across the world do not have the same opportunities to play freely and develop because of the barriers caused by COVID-19. Cross Cultures is determined to bring fun football and games to those affected, using its special fun football programme as a platform to stimulate well-being and share experiences and hardship. Cross Cultures is reaching out to children and their volunteer coaches, giving them the opportunity to play in smaller groups, in accordance with the Cross Cultures Corona Guidelines, as well as providing blended learning through the Cross Cultures Virtual Clubhouse."

Objective
This initiative seeks to provide blended learning, with fun football in small groups on the pitch being complemented by fun games and the teaching of life skills off it.

The Wow! factor
Created in response to COVID-19, this online platform harnesses Cross Cultures’ passion for teaching and provides a safe space for children, young people and adults, allowing them to be together while remaining physically distant.

Stakeholders and partners
- The development of the platform was a collaborative effort, with content being provided by colleagues in 22 different countries across the Cross Cultures network.
- The Danish Football Association helped to develop the e-gaming section of the platform, among others.
- Ten committees were established, focusing on different aspects of the project, furthering the sharing of knowledge between Cross
  Cultures partners.

“Working on the development of the Cross Cultures Virtual Clubhouse through the different committees has been really interesting. Everyone gets to work in their own field of expertise

icrc.org

Mission

The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) is an impartial, neutral and independent organisation whose mission is to protect and assist victims of armed conflict and other violent situations.

SDGs 2.8, 3.c, 4.1, 8.3

Objectives

- Provide rehabilitation services to people with physical disabilities.
- Provide expert advice and training to the staff of ICRC-supported physical rehabilitation centres, as well as financial support for people studying to become physiotherapists or prosthetists/orthotists.
- Improve access to social integration activities (including sport) for people with physical disabilities.
- Raise awareness of how sport can help conflict-affected people with physical disabilities to cope with their situation.

Highlight

In 2019/20, the ICRC fostered the social integration of people with physical disabilities in South Sudan by means of various activities as part of its physical rehabilitation programme. One of the ways in which it helped to ease their reintegration into society was through sport, with activities including amputee football and wheelchair basketball.

The ICRC worked with the South Sudanese authorities and other local partners to break down the barriers and stigma that are associated with physical disabilities. It used sport to deepen people’s understanding of the issues faced by those living with these disabilities and strove to help physically disabled people to lead active and dignified lives, helping them to build confidence and establish a sense of community with other people facing similar challenges.

In its efforts to support the creation of an amputee football programme in the country, the ICRC consulted the South Sudan Football Association on possible implementation strategies and other ways of promoting the sport. It also helped to organise an amputee football match in Rumbek, in coordination with the ministry of culture, youth and sport and the ministry of gender and social welfare. The majority of the players involved were registered on an ICRC database, as they were regular patients at ICRC-supported physical rehabilitation centres, but those players also invited other people with physical disabilities to participate in the match.

I was afraid people were going to laugh at us when we played football on crutches. It was something new to us at first, but the support we got from the crowd was overwhelming.”

Concluding remarks

"UEFA is one of the ICRC’s longest-serving, most committed humanitarian partners. Their generous support over the years has helped us to help some of the most vulnerable people in society – those living with disabilities in the midst of armed conflict. In places like Afghanistan and South Sudan, the growth of sport in physical rehabilitation programmes has been a real game-changer – boosting people’s physical well-being, promoting social inclusion, restoring a sense of dignity, and simply providing fun and enjoyment. This has helped people with disabilities break down barriers, to participate in society and reach their true potential.”

Robert Mardini, director general, ICRC
Good Practice

Investing in people’s abilities and empowering them to contribute to the sustainability of the physical rehabilitation sector

Objective

Provide expert advice and training to staff at the ICRC-supported physical rehabilitation centres in Juba, Rumbek and Wau, as well as financial support for people studying to become physiotherapists or prosthetists/orthotists.

The Wow! factor

The ICRC has always applied a people-centric approach to its humanitarian work. In addition to providing physical rehabilitation centres with material and financial assistance, it also helps their staff to hone their skills. By investing in the enhancement of their professional abilities, it empowers them to contribute to the overall sustainability of the physical rehabilitation sector. In addition, it provides scholarships to students studying physical rehabilitation, giving them the opportunity to pursue careers in that field (which, in some cases, results in them working for ICRC-supported centres).

Stakeholders and partners

- ICRC-supported physical rehabilitation centres
- St Mary’s University in Juba
- Cambodian School of Prosthetics & Orthotics

At the end of 2019/20, there were 29 staff members at the ICRC-supported physical rehabilitation centres (12 prosthetic and orthotic specialists, seven physiotherapists and ten technical assistants) who were receiving regular on-the-job training to help improve their skills. In addition, three students have been given ICRC scholarships to support their physical rehabilitation studies (either in South Sudan or elsewhere).

I feel 100 percent about the way I work here. I am happy that I am disabled, because it makes it possible for me to know exactly what areas could hurt and how it feels.”

Makur Madof Diet, technician at the ICRC-supported physical rehabilitation centre in Rumbek

Highlight

Sport frequently hit the headlines in 2019/20 on account of the COVID-19 pandemic, with major events around the world being cancelled or postponed. It was not just elite sport that was affected, though. Grassroots sports clubs and organisations using sport to foster social change also had their activities suspended or moved online.

COVID-19 and the resulting lockdowns have had a catastrophic impact, with the most vulnerable in society being hit the hardest. However, this has also created space for reflection. Does sport need to change? Should it reimagine its role in society? How can it better serve the needs of communities?

SDGs 17.6, 17.9, 17.16,17.17, 17.18, 17.19

In April 2020, sportanddev started an online conversation on this subject. It began with a call for articles, with 68 authors from around the world submitting 55 articles. Subjects covered ranged from the need to use sport to tackle gender equality and address mental health issues arising from the crisis to the need to invest more in community sport and make sport more inclusive.

This was followed by a webinar, which saw almost 1,000 people tune in via Zoom, Facebook and YouTube to engage in robust discussion with an expert panel. A report looking at ten key issues arising from the call for articles and the webinar is set to be presented to sports leaders.

“Sport, as a human, social phenomenon, is irreplaceable. So why are we not talking about this more? Why are we not priming ourselves to create a future that embraces more of the assets of sport that go beyond the charts and spreadsheets of the sports industry?”

Marjorie Enya, master’s student at the International Olympic Academy and a member of both the World Rugby Council and the Brazilian Rugby Confederation’s executive committee.
As a result of COVID-19, very few events were held. Taken from sportanddev’s 2020 annual survey of users.

• sportanddev added a section to its website on measuring sports’ contribution to the UN’s Sustainable Development Goals, which are a global framework for ending poverty, protecting the planet and ensuring that all people enjoy peace and prosperity by 2030.

Additional achievements

• In 2019/20, sportanddev featured 54 articles and events written and organised by UEFA and its FSR partners (including CAFE, the Fair network and Healthy Stadia).

• In partnership with the Australian government and the Commonwealth, sportanddev created an online sport and development course—the first of its kind. The first cohort of students are due to commence their studies on 20 July 2020.

• When COVID-19 was declared a global pandemic in March 2020, sportanddev dedicated a section of its website to it, providing a space where organisations could share their experiences of how the situation had affected them and how they had adapted to it. By the end of 2019/20, sportanddev had published 41 articles, as well as a list of useful resources.

• sportanddev added a section to its website on measuring sports’ contribution to the UN’s Sustainable Development Goals, which are a global framework for ending poverty, protecting the planet and ensuring that all people enjoy peace and prosperity by 2030.

Concluding remarks

COVID-19 has had a huge impact on society. Sport has been affected, but it can also be part of the solution. sportanddev is playing an active role in helping sports organisations to overcome the crisis, while providing the resources they need to have a more positive influence on society.

Webinar on reimagining the future of sport and development

Objective
Provide recommendations to the sports industry, helping it to adapt to the COVID-19 pandemic and improve its contribution to local communities in the future.

The Wow! factor
sportanddev arranged for organisations in six countries across five continents to provide speakers and moderators for the webinar. Webinar participants came from a wide range of different organisations, including NGOs, private companies, universities, governments and intergovernmental entities. Overall, a wide variety of perspectives were taken into account when producing recommendations for the sports industry (which will be shared in a report in 2020/21).

Stakeholders and partners
- Brown University (United States)
- The Foundation of Sport and Development and Peace (South Africa)
- Rekha Dey and Associates (India)
- Commonwealth Secretariat (international intergovernmental organisation based in the United Kingdom)
- Women Win (Netherlands)
- Youth Network for Sport, Development and Peace (South Africa)
- Pacific Sports Partnership (Australia)

1000
Almost 1,000 people from more than 70 countries watched the webinar via Zoom, Facebook and YouTube.

“Those who continue to invest in women’s sport, parasport and sport for development will come out much stronger in the long term than those who don’t.”
Ben Howard, programme manager, Pacific Sports Partnership

Child safeguarding
Mission
Terre des hommes is committed to bringing meaningful and lasting change to the lives of children and youth, especially to those most exposed to risks.

www.tdh.ch

Objectives
UEFA’s partnership with Terre des hommes is aimed at strengthening its capacity to safeguard and protect children and young people involved in football across Europe. It seeks, in particular, to:

- ensure that football is a safe, positive and enjoyable experience for all children involved in the game, regardless of age, gender, sexual orientation, ethnicity, social background, faith, ability or disability;
- raise awareness among national associations, coaches, match officials, administrative and support staff, parents and children in order to minimise the likelihood of harm occurring;
- strengthen the child safeguarding skills of national associations, coaches and other individuals involved in children’s football activities, through both online and offline training;
- ensure effective policies, practices and procedures are in place to prevent harm from occurring; and
- help create channels to identify and address any child safeguarding concerns that may arise.

www.uefa-safeguarding.eu

Highlight
In April 2020, UEFA and Terre des hommes launched a free child safeguarding toolkit for European football.

Developed following extensive consultation with European football’s 55 national associations, UEFA’s new child safeguarding toolkit is designed to ensure a safe playing environment for the millions of children of all ages and levels of ability who take part in football activities across the continent.

Underlining UEFA’s commitment to protecting, promoting and developing the game, this new set of resources provides comprehensive guidance on how to develop and strengthen child safeguarding measures, setting out standard steps and best practice approaches to the establishment of successful and sustainable policies.

Terre des hommes and UEFA have also established a digital platform, seeking to improve the knowledge, attitudes and practices of everyone involved in football. Anyone who works with children in a football setting, either directly or indirectly (coaches, doctors, drivers, etc.), or simply has an interest in child safeguarding in football, is welcome to access the online platform. It offers e-learning courses (including an awareness-raising course, as well as courses for staff, coaches and child safeguarding focal points), webinars, news articles, access to the child safeguarding toolkit and a comprehensive library of resources, as well as the opportunity to share experiences and expertise with fellow professionals.

“Child safeguarding is an important cornerstone of Swiss football club culture. With the new toolkit and the e-learning platform from UEFA and Terre des hommes, coaches and club managers can be even more vigilant and exemplary behaviour can be strengthened.”

Benjamin Eglı, head of club development, Swiss Football Association
Additional achievements

- UEFA published its child safeguarding policy, reaffirming its commitment to ensuring that football is a safe and positive experience for all children involved in the game.
- A sample child safeguarding policy was made available to support national football associations in their efforts to protect children. The policy sets out guiding principles, minimum requirements and procedures to be followed in order to provide a safe environment for children.
- Child safeguarding was made a fundamental part of the UEFA PlayMakers programme and the UEFA women’s football strategy.

Concluding remarks

"Playing football (or any other sport) must be a safe and enjoyable experience for children. A nurturing environment is essential for their healthy development and achievement of full potential. The new child safeguarding toolkit and online courses developed by UEFA and Terre des hommes are a practical and accessible way of ensuring that.”

Arina Cretu, communications manager for Europe region, Terre des hommes

137 The launch of the online awareness-raising module was delayed until early May, reducing the amount of time available for awareness raising. For that reason, the number is lower than the projected figure indicated in last year’s report.
138 The pilot for this project will begin in October 2020.
139 Materials include online training modules, awareness-raising materials, and policies and templates (codes of conduct, risk assessments, safer recruitment checklists, etc.).
140 This KPI has been amended since last year to include national associations which are working on their child safeguarding policies (in addition to those that already have such a policy).
141 As a result of the changes to this KPI, the figure (25) that was reported last year for the 2018/19 season is no longer relevant.
142 The role of the safeguarding focal point is to act as a point of contact, and to advise, support and assist the organisation in the implementation of its safeguarding policy and associated procedures, including in response to specific cases and concerns.”
Objective

Terre des hommes’ Football for Protection methodology aims to strengthen young people’s resilience and increase their well-being, helping them to develop interpersonal and leadership skills, empowering them to engage actively in their communities and promoting positive social change. It is used in a number of countries around the world, including Greece, where a pilot project was established in 2019. The project reinforced the social inclusion and emotional well-being of young refugees. Through the activities, they met friends and acquired life and football skills.

The Wow! factor

This methodology was originally devised for football, but it can be used with other sports as well. In India, for example, Terre des hommes uses it to empower girls who are at risk of or affected by unsafe migration, forced marriage and trafficking. Terre des hommes also uses it to promote gender equality through kabaddi, a very popular contact team sport in the Indian subcontinent and neighbouring countries.

Stakeholders and partners

- Young people and coaches from Greece, India, Egypt and Moldova
- Local sports organisations in Thessaloniki, Greece

‘Terre des hommes’ pilot project in Greece was notable for the following:

- 251 people were reached.
- 200 refugees from 20 countries participated.
- 60 football training sessions were held.
- Nine Football for All events were organised.
- 70% of participants felt more confident and resilient after the activities.

Human rights
Mission
The Centre for Sport and Human Rights works towards achieving a sporting world that fully respects human rights through collective action and by promoting and supporting its Sporting Chance Principles.

Objectives
Help to prevent human rights violations through sport.
Support access to effective remedies where violations occur.
Promote a positive human rights legacy through sport and sporting events.

Highlight
Translating the Centre’s various tools and guides (which were created in cooperation with stakeholders) into tangible action was a major feature of its work in 2019/20. That shift from words to action was most evident at the Commonwealth Games Federation’s General Assembly in Kigali, Rwanda, where the Centre first introduced its work on integrating human rights into the governance of sports bodies and federations at national level. This is work that members of the Centre’s Advisory Council (including UEFA and other sports bodies) helped to develop.
The next step will be to produce an appendix to the Championing Human Rights in the Governance of Sport Bodies guide for national multi-sport bodies, and then to look at how this relates to national single-sport federations, including national football associations.

Additional achievements
• The Centre continued to work with broadcasters on collective action relating to high-risk events. Work in this area started with the 2019 Europa league final in Azerbaijan, with the Centre bringing UEFA, BT Sport and others together to discuss some of the issues on the ground. It then continued later in 2019 in the context of events taking place in China and Saudi Arabia, setting a new standard for the Centre’s work with broadcasters.
• A first annual meeting of leading sports lawyers on the subject of human rights was held at the Palais des Nations in Geneva in November 2019, with a large number of sports bodies in attendance and high-level representation from UEFA.
• As the world grappled with the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic, the Centre played a central role in encouraging dialogue among stakeholders, looking at how the pandemic was affecting sport and how sport could respond (publishing, for example, a guide for sports bodies entitled Putting People First).
• When #BlackLivesMatter protests spread around the world, the Centre brought stakeholders together to look at how sport can accommodate athletes’ freedom of expression, particularly for those wishing to protest peacefully. The Centre also wrote a guest blog post for the World Economic Forum on that subject.

Key performance indicators
The Centre is currently in the process of drafting a strategic plan for the three-year period starting in January 2021, which will coincide with it becoming fully independent from its parent body, the Institute for Human Rights and Business. UEFA and other Advisory Council members will be consulted on the development of that plan in the second half of 2020.

Concluding remarks

“The Centre continues to demonstrate the impact that collective action can have when harnessed and brought to bear to tackle some of sport’s toughest human rights challenges. With 2020 presenting an extraordinary test for human rights and sport, the Centre can be counted on to help stakeholders in sport to reflect on how it can be built back in a way that is fundamentally fairer to all.”

143 The Centre defines a ‘remedy’ in the same way as the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights: www.ohchr.org/Documents/Publications/GuidingPrinciplesBusinessHR_EN.pdf

144 RESPECT UEFA Football and Social Responsibility Report 2019/20
More than 30 sports bodies attended the 2019 Sporting Chance Forum, bringing more sports into the Centre’s sphere of influence.

Objective
Collective action is central to all of the Centre’s work and is therefore instrumental in helping to prevent human rights abuses, ensure access to remedies and promote a positive legacy in terms of human rights.

The Wow! factor
The Centre has always engaged in collective action through its Advisory Council, but the 2019/20 season saw that approach being expanded to encompass other parties that are not often considered by the world of sport, including national human rights institutions (in connection with sports bodies in the relevant countries), sports lawyers and smaller sports federations.

Stakeholders and partners
• 46 Advisory Council members
• Sports bodies
• Business
• Governments
• National human rights bodies

“Our collaborative approach to tackling issues head on means we’ve not only created efficiencies but are also able to involve more voices in identifying and supporting actionable solutions to human rights harms in sport.”

Mission

Football Supporters Europe (FSE) is a sustainable and democratic representative organisation that gives European football fans a voice, empowers supporters organisations and promotes dialogue, inclusion and respect for human and civil rights across all football stakeholders.

fanseurope.org

Objectives

- Run an independent, democratic and non-profit-making organisation bringing together football fans from across Europe.
- Provide advice and support to supporters organisations at both club and national level.
- Liaise with institutions and governing bodies to represent supporters’ perspectives and interests.
- Promote dialogue, inclusion and respect for human and civil rights across all football stakeholders.

Additional achievements

- FSE successfully lobbied for the introduction of a price cap on away tickets in UEFA club competitions, working with national and club-based supporters’ organisations to collect hard, reliable data on price inflation through the FSE Away Fans Survey. FSE continues to work closely with UEFA to ensure that this data informs the ongoing debate and influences key stakeholders.

Highlight

FSE, in cooperation with SD Europe, launched the FANS vs COVID-19 initiative in March 2020 to highlight the good work being done by European fans, fan groups and member-run clubs during the COVID-19 pandemic. That work spans a wide range of activities, from fundraising and solidarity banners to support for vulnerable groups and health services. Notable projects include Fans Supporting Foodbanks and Merseyside PPE Hub, which are run jointly by fans of local rivals Everton FC and Liverpool FC.

Fan groups from across the continent have always spent a great deal of time and effort volunteering to improve their local communities. The past few months have demonstrated just how important this sense of solidarity is in times of crisis, not to mention how football fans continue to defy unwarranted stereotypes. FANS vs COVID-19 doesn’t just bring this to the attention of other football stakeholders and the general public; it provides a useful repository of ideas and contacts for those who wish to make a positive impact, too.”

Mission
SD Europe seeks to increase supporters’ involvement in the running of football clubs and football institutions and promote solidarity across all levels of football.

Sd_europe.eu

Objectives
Build capacity and facilitate the continued growth of SD Europe’s network.

Identify new and diverse sources of funding at European and national level.

Cooperate with various stakeholders at European level (such as UEFA, the European Parliament, the European Commission, the Council of Europe, the European Leagues and FIFPro).

Provide stable and innovative support to SD Europe’s membership.

Provide training to supporter liaison officers, delivering a dedicated SLO education programme through the UEFA Academy.

Supporter liaison with SLOs was prepared for submission to the EU Council of Ministers in early 2020.

Pilot training courses were hosted by the Danish Football League and the Football Union of Russia as part of the UEFA Academy’s SLO Education Programme.

A Fans Matter! kick-off event was held in Brussels in February 2020, attended by national supporters organisations and national football associations from seven countries on three continents.

The SD Europe Fund supported projects in Scotland, Germany, Israel, Poland and Cyprus.

Additional achievements
• National SLO development action plans were developed by six governing bodies in 2019 as part of the Erasmus+ project LEASS, and a draft resolution on police liaison with SLOs was prepared for submission to the EU Council of Ministers in early 2020.
• Pilot training courses were hosted by the Danish Football League and the Football Union of Russia as part of the UEFA Academy’s SLO Education Programme.
• A Fans Matter! kick-off event was held in Brussels in February 2020, attended by national supporters organisations and national football associations from seven countries on three continents.
• The SD Europe Fund supported projects in Scotland, Germany, Israel, Poland and Cyprus

Since 2016/17, SD Europe has – partly as a result of the Fans Matter! project – raised and distributed a total of almost €900,000 to its network (supporters organisations and member-run clubs), national associations and leagues. For every €1 contributed by UEFA in support of such projects, SD Europe has generated and distributed €7.50. In other words, SD Europe has, over the last four seasons, taken the €120,000 contributed by UEFA as seed/co-financing for projects and generated an additional €780,000.

"The Fans Matter! project is about promoting values shared by the Commission: transparency, democracy and dialogue in sport. And it is, above all, about passion: passion for sport, passion for football and passion for our club!"
Yves Le Lostecque, head of sports unit, European Commission

Football can be improved through greater democracy, cooperation, solidarity and sustainability. We believe that the creation of meaningful, equal partnerships between supporters organisations and football authorities is essential in order to achieve that. In order to release the community power that these organisations have, supporters organisations need to have the resources to operate professionally and SLOs require further training. Objectives

The SD Europe Fund provides members with the financial support they need to lead their own projects. The objective of the fund is to enable members of the SD Europe network to establish their own projects, further fostering supporter involvement and strengthening their positions within their own respective ecosystems.

The Wow! factor

For the first time ever, fan groups have drawn up a long-term, structured plan aimed at using their own resources for the development and implementation of national and transnational projects, addressing governance issues in football relating to democracy, cooperation, solidarity and sustainability.

Stakeholders and partners

The first beneficiaries of the SD Europe Fund are:
- Israfans (Israel), which will provide expert and tailored consultancy services to its member-run clubs on developing volunteer management
- Unsere Kurve (Germany), which will improve the preparation and coordination of its contributions to the task force which is to be set up by the German Football League in autumn 2020
- SD Scotland (Scotland), which will conduct research looking at best practices in the area of volunteering and signpost volunteering opportunities for its network
- Member-run clubs CAP Ciudad de Murcia, FC Tarraco and UP Palencia (Spain), AKS Złot (Poland) and PAC Omonia (Cyprus), which will be involved in exchange visits with other clubs in SD Europe’s network, benefiting all involved as a result of the sharing of experiences

"The SD Europe Fund’s support comes from fans and will help us revitalise a national consultation process that has stagnated in recent years. This is of great benefit to our organisation and will help fans all over Europe to develop independent projects that help them build capacity and improve cooperation at national and European level.”

Markus Sotirianos, vice chair, Unsere Kurve

Introducing audio-descriptive commentary for partially sighted and blind supporters in San Marino

Challenge
Audio-descriptive commentary (ADC) is a completely new service in San Marino, with partially sighted and blind spectators having no readily available alternative. As part of a HatTrick FSR project aimed at improving accessibility and inclusivity across the national stadium, the San Marino Football Federation (FSGC) was keen to provide this inclusive service and help partially sighted and blind people to feel welcome when supporting the national side.

Goal
The goal of this project was to ensure that the service was available in time for the final round of the UEFA European Under-21 Championship in 2019, since San Marino was co-hosting the tournament. CAFE provided training for local commentators through its expert ADC training programme and network, meaning that the service could have a legacy beyond the tournament itself.

Partners
- CAFE
- FSGC
- UEFA
- CAFE ADC network trainers

As a result of growing demand, the FSGC has already had to triple the number of available headsets and receivers to allow more partially sighted and blind fans to access the service.

The Wow! factor
CAFE, with the assistance of two trainers from its expert ADC network, delivered a two-day training seminar in San Marino. The seminar was also attended by a DAO from AC Milan, who later commissioned CAFE to run a similar seminar in Milan. That club has since started providing an ADC service at all home matches, receiving highly positive feedback from its partially sighted and blind supporters. Thus, as a result of that initial seminar in San Marino, ADC services have now been introduced in two countries, and there is much greater awareness of and interest in this service across Italian clubs.

What’s next?
An ADC service was made available at every match that San Marino hosted during the tournament. It has continued to be offered at every home fixture played by the men’s national team, and the service has grown exponentially. The hope is that, as more partially sighted and blind people become aware of ADC, the service will continue to grow and develop in stadiums across San Marino, making football more accessible to all fans.

UEFA Youth League Social Project

Challenge

Many people think that football is just a form of entertainment, competition or exercise, rather than being part of the broader social community. Consequently, the emphasis on social responsibility within football can be lost unless it is actively encouraged and fostered.

Goal

To encourage young players to engage with projects and people in their communities, helping to develop a greater understanding of social responsibility and how it can be fostered through football.

The UEFA Youth League Social Project promotes the fundamental concepts of respect and integrity across the game and society as a whole. The primary objective of the UEFA Youth League is to develop and educate youth players. With gestures and initiatives like this one, not only do we give future professionals an invaluable experience, they also set an example for other players and members of society to follow.”

Stakeholder engagement process

Challenge
In spring 2020, as UEFA and the rest of the world faced up to the challenges presented by the COVID-19 pandemic, it was clear that a decision needed to be taken regarding EURO 2020, thinking about how that would affect a variety of different stakeholders.

Goal
The stakeholder engagement process sought to reach an understanding and agreement on the rescheduling of EURO 2020, with the aim of minimising the negative impact on stakeholders while ensuring that health protocols were followed and travel restrictions were understood and communicated.

Partners
- UEFA units
- National associations
- Commercial partners
- Suppliers
- Fans

UEFA carried out a wide-ranging stakeholder engagement process before deciding to postpone EURO 2020 to 2021. All relevant stakeholders were identified, as was the impact that the postponement would have on each of them. UEFA approached each decision with a desire to minimise the negative impact. From suppliers to new recruits, its goal was always to honour contracts and thus minimise the negative financial impact on people and businesses.

UEFA recognised the impact that COVID-19 had had on fans, so it gave all ticket holders (both members of the general public and people who had purchased them through participating national associations) the opportunity to return them via its ticket return portal and obtain a refund. In addition, because of the uncertainty brought about by these extraordinary circumstances, UEFA is also allowing people with tickets to transfer them to a friend or relative.

When it took the decision to postpone EURO 2020 to 2021, UEFA embarked on discussions with stakeholders with the aim of minimising the negative impact of the decision while still adhering to social and health guidelines. With such a massive project, it is important to obtain the views and agreement of all the stakeholders involved.”

Martin Kallen, CEO, UEFA Events SA
Decision regarding rebranding

Challenge
In spring 2020, UEFA decided to postpone EURO 2020 to 2021 on account of the COVID-19 pandemic. This would mean that all event branding for the tournament, from merchandise to event materials, would no longer have the correct year on it. And yet, at the same time, a huge amount of materials had already been produced, which would result in a large amount of waste and an expensive rebranding and reproduction exercise.

Goal
The goal of everyone involved in this decision was to minimise the waste generated by EURO 2020. This tournament will represent a milestone in UEFA’s commitment to the environment, from the offsetting of fans’ travel to the minimisation of waste.

Partners
- UEFA units
- UEFA partners

UEFA’s decision not to rebrand the tournament is in line with its commitment to the sustainability of EURO 2020, which includes the minimisation of waste.

FSR survey

Challenge
Given UEFA’s broad reach across its 55 member associations, understanding the extent of social responsibility initiatives and the overall level of commitment in each country can be difficult, and implementing initiatives in the context of national team matches and club competitions can be challenging, depending on the association’s knowledge and resources.

Goal
UEFA’s partners requested that this survey be carried out in order to gain a more comprehensive understanding of the FSR commitments of each national association, with a strong focus on health, accessibility and supporter relations. That understanding will help UEFA and its partners to support the member associations as they work towards becoming more inclusive and health-conscious.

Partners
• Healthy Stadia
• CAFE
• SD Europe
• Colour Blind Awareness
• UEFA member associations

Four key expert NGOs from UEFA’s portfolio of FSR partners worked with it to create this comprehensive survey, covering topics ranging from stadium smoking policies to colour blind awareness protocols.

What’s next?
UEFA and its partners will use the information accumulated through the FSR survey to gain a better understanding of where national associations are at present and how best to support them in implementing social responsibility initiatives within their events, activities and competitions in the future.

The UEFA FSR survey proved a powerful tool for Healthy Stadia to gain up to date information on current tobacco control policies at football venues across the 55 UEFA members associations. We were able to collect a very rich set of data from the survey responses, and this contributed directly to the evidence-base for our Tobacco-Free Stadia Declaration that is now being rolled out to associations and league operators across Europe.”

Concluding remarks and outlook
The 2019/20 season began with excitement and anticipation ahead of EURO 2020, which was due to mark the 60th anniversary of UEFA’s first European championship. As plans began to change and events were postponed or cancelled on account of COVID-19, UEFA continued to support its FSR partners and projects across Europe. Despite the disruption, UEFA’s units, portfolio partners and member associations continued to work towards achieving the social responsibility goals that had been set at the beginning of the season, with a view to making the business processes of UEFA and the national associations more socially responsible.

A EURO for the whole of Europe

More than ever, as we move towards the postponed EURO 2020, UEFA hopes that this event will not only celebrate the 60th anniversary of UEFA’s first continental championship, but also serve as a reminder of the year 2020 and what that has meant to the global football community and the world as a whole. As UEFA’s Return to Play protocol unfolds, with fans, players, referees, coaches and the wider football community united in the simple joy and relief that football brings, that event is set to take on a whole new meaning.

Development of the FSR network

Three regional FSR workshops were successfully delivered in 2019/20 in order to inform national associations of relevant changes to FSR programmes within HatTrick V. This involved the development of several new resources, such as an FSR roadmap, FSR strategy guidelines and one-to-one tutoring. In addition, UEFA began hosting peer-to-peer FSR strategy presentations in order to strengthen bonds within the FSR network and help national associations to share best practices with their peers.

At the same time, an online UEFA Football and Social Responsibility Forum was established in order to provide further support to the growing number of FSR practitioners at national associations. That forum is intended as a place where members – which, at the time of writing, comprise 170 national association staff, UEFA employees, UEFA FSR partners and international experts – can keep one another informed regarding relevant articles and good practices, share ideas, and find effective ways of working together on initiatives.
Child safeguarding
UEFA and Terre des hommes launched a child safeguarding policy and toolkit for European football in 2019/20. A digital platform was also established, offering content such as e-learning courses, webinars, news and a library of thematic resources. These initiatives underline UEFA’s commitment to protecting, promoting and developing the game, setting out standard procedures and best practice approaches.

Climate action
UEFA is determined to continue its efforts in the area of climate action and make SDG 13 a priority. UEFA’s decision to compensate for all fans travelling to EURO 2020 was the first time that any sporting organisation had taken such a step in relation to a mass-participation sporting event. UEFA hopes that other organisations will quickly follow suit, looking at the impact that their events are having on the climate and the long-term effects on sport. Everybody needs to make fundamental changes to their behaviour in light of the looming climate crisis.

Contents

- Ireland
  - Children and young people involved in football Technical staff Volunteers
  - Train football coaches to be the best possible role models, be aware of all signs of child abuse, seek to prevent and minimise abuse, and support children affected by it. Owing to the high levels of migration among adults of working age, more than 20% of children are reared by only one of their parents, and 11% are not raised by either parent. As a result, football coaches can sometimes be the only trusted adult in a child's life.

- Montenegro
  - Use the popularity of football to promote equality, human rights and non-discrimination, empower disadvantaged and minority groups, and foster equal participation by women and girls.

- Netherlands
  - Use the Mobile Young Eagles Academy's reach outside of major football activities. Use the popularity of football to introduce educational activities.

- Northern Ireland
  - Young people with mental health problems, suicide, etc. within clubs and provide training to help deal with this key issue within society.

- North Macedonia
  - Improve the accessibility of more stadiums in North Macedonia; improve the services offered (ticket sales, websites, etc.) and introduce audio-descriptive commentary, work with NGOs and CARE to achieve the project's objectives; work with parents, young people and teachers to introduce educational activities.

- Norway
  - Promoting economic exclusion and social marginalisation in football.
  - Ensure that players from economically disadvantaged backgrounds retain access to football using scientific studies, specialised toolkits and key information.

- Portugal
  - Make grants available for projects that are of relevance to Portuguese society, using football as the delivery mechanism.

A number of planned events were unable to take place in 2019/20 on account of COVID-19. They have been postponed to 2020/21 and will be documented in the next report.

In 2019/20, UEFA gave grants to three people – Henry Majale from the Mathare Youth Sports Association (MYSA) in Nairobi (Kenya), Nicole Winkelhake from FSE and Lena Gustafson from SD Europe – to allow them to participate in the CFM. That course addresses key areas of football management which are necessary for people working in the football industry.

The Mathare Youth Sports Association was established in 1987 as a self-help youth sports and community service project, using sport to reach young people in Mathare and neighbouring areas on the outskirts of Nairobi, which make up one of Africa’s largest, densest and poorest slums. For decades now, it has used sport to empower young people, with a particular focus on sport for girls. UEFA gave the association financial support in 2019/20, which helped it to navigate the new COVID-19 reality.

Eat4Goals app

Relaunch of Eat4Goals website

In 2019/20, UEFA, in cooperation with the World Heart Federation and the British Heart Foundation, supported the relaunch of eat4goals.com. The Eat4Goals app and website aim to inspire people (particularly children) to eat healthily by providing details of the favourite recipes and food tips of some of football’s biggest names.

UEFA

Research project on environmental impact of signage

UEFA is working with the International Olympic Committee on a collaborative project analysing the environmental impact of temporary look and branding overlay material (signage). This is an ongoing research project and is due to be concluded by the end of 2020.

The primary objective of this research is to obtain credible information on the environmental impact of branding and signage material over its life cycle in order to inform decision-making by event organisers. The focus is on products that are currently available on the market and – if relevant – products that are still in development but could provide significant environmental benefits. This will be achieved by conducting simple life cycle assessments, comparing the different materials and taking account of various life cycle options.
